British Note Rejects Plan For Paying Debt in Kind

Reply to U. S. Declares Cash Deal Obstacles Apply to Goods.

Sum That Should Be Paid Is Stressed

Issue Regarded as Dead Unless New Approach Is Found.

By Elliott Thurston.

In a brief and blunt note yesterday the British government threw cold water on Secretary of State Hull's suggestions for studying the possibility of making "payments in kind" on the war debt.

Holding that obstacles to paying in cash apply equally to paying in goods, the note declared that "the primary question for settlement is the amount that should be paid."

And the note reiterated the time does not seem propitious for arriving at a readjustment of the settlement signed in June of 1923 under which, over a 62-year period, the British contracted to pay us $11,105,965,000. Of this total, $4,600,000,000 represented principal, $6,505,965,000 interest.

The British note, replying to Secretary Hull's note of June 12, leaves the debt situation about where it was when, on June 4, the British government notified the State Department that no more "token" or other payments would be made upon the debt.

Issue Remains Deadlocked.

While the State Department had small expectation of collecting much of anything by payments in goods or services, Secretary Hull hoped to keep the debts alive and put upon the British responsibility for the initiative in advancing some proposal for readjustment. The latest British communication undertakes to shift the initiative back to the United States.

Since the British appear to have no disposition to make us an offer, and since the State Department has held all along that it is up to the debtors and not up to us to make proposals, the debt issue remains deadlocked.

The chief point made by Secretary Hull in his note of June 12 was that the British had decided to stop all payments without having come forward with any concrete proposals whatever for making payments in some other form if, as they held, they could not pay in cash.

"For instance," said the note, "no proposal has ever been presented to this Government looking toward

Posse Starts Search for Trio After Escape in Braxton.

Clarksburg, W. Va., June 27 (Spl.).—A posse was searching the hill country surrounding Sutton tonight for three prisoners who early today clubbed a jailer to death and fled from the Braxton County Jail.

Earl Bland, 54, the jailer, died in an ambulance at the door of a Clarksburg hospital several hours after the men crept upon him in the jail and crushed his skull with a piece of metal pipe.

A number of citizens joined the State and county police in the search.

A squad of State police late today went to Mill Creek, 15 miles south of Sutton, after a report that the three fugitives had been seen there.

The men who escaped are Camden Roode, 30, alias Harvey E. Hall, of Frametown, who was serving a term for escaping from a road gang; Raymond Mace, 19, of Chemical, charged with a store robbery, and Elliott Keener, 18, farm laborer, of Dane, Webster County.

The prisoners used a smuggled saw to cut bars from the cell corridor. They used Bland's keys to open the outer door. Five other prisoners failed to follow but gave no alarm of the escape, which was not discovered for several hours.

Bullet Fells Man In Bedroom Tree

Norfolk, Va., June 27 (Spl.).—When his daughter told him there was a man in a tree outside her bedroom window at 1:30 a. m. today, Charles H. Bell, 63, fired a pistol twice and a man tumbled from the tree.

The police found George Wayson, 35, of 626 Lovett avenue, with a wound in his back under the right shoulder blade. He had crawled to a yard adjoining that of the Bells. He was sent to a hospital and his condition today was reported serious.

Mr. Bell's daughter was preparing to retire, when she saw a man in the tree, according to police. Her screams brought her parents hurrying to her room and she told them what she had seen.

Gang Kidnaps Union Leader In Mill Strike

Hosiery Workers' Chief, Blamed in NRA Row, Warned to Leave.

Harriman, Tenn., June 27 (AP).—Fred Held, vice president of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, today was kidnaped by a band of armed men and later released after threats of death and a warning not to return to this State.

Held was picked up by searching officers shortly after his release and reached Chattanooga several hours later by train to tell a story of a wild ride during which a mill worker constantly flourished a gun and remarked that it was "too bad Hugh Johnson isn't here to get a dose of this, too."

Held, taken from a train at Harriman by force, said the mob blamed the union for closing of the Harriman hosiery mill after the NRA withdrew the mill's Blue Eagle. He charged that mill officials had given the workers a wrong conception of the difficulties with the Recovery Administration.

Kidnaped in Auto.

After taking Held from the train the mob forced him into one of six automobiles and started toward Scott County. Held said he was told he was being "taken for a ride."

After going some distance the group stopped for a conference and finally told Held he could go if he would promise never to return.

Previously he said he had tried to talk to the men but after asking them if they believed in the NRA and receiving the reply "we don't want a damned thing to do with it," he had kept quiet.

Finally released, Held said he started on the road and was met by officers who offered to take

Sworn Denial Of Auto Pact Is Demanded

Ruling on Lobby Order Sent to Woodring by McCarl.

By Frank Getty.

The House Military Affairs Investigating Committee announced yesterday it would not be satisfied with a second-hand denial of charges that a General Motors Corporation official proposed price fixing among three competitors for War Department business.

The charges were made under oath Tuesday by R. P. Sabine, Ford agent, and were denied yesterday by Joseph B. Woodside, Washington manager of fleet sales for General Motors.

Woodside, expressing a desire to testify before the committee, said he had a letter from Norman K. Haig, the accused General Motors official, branding Sabine's charges as "absolutely false."

Sabine had testified that Haig proposed to him and another Ford representative that Genera' Motors, Ford and the Chrysler Co. "get together" and split the War Department business to their mutual profit.

Denial Sent From Detroit.

Haig's denial, made public by Woodside, was sent from Detroit.

"The committee is not disposed to accept the denial in this manner," Representative Kvale (Farmer-Labor), Minnesota, said yesterday.

"We feel that sworn testimony should be met with sworn testimony.

"This is a very serious charge against the General Motors Corporation, and we can not see why they do not send Mr. Haig here to answer it."

Speaking on behalf of Haig, Woodside said the former had not met Sabine at the time of the alleged conference at Camp Holabird, Md., last January.

Reiterating his charge, Sabine said both he and E. C. Simonds, another Ford representative, clearly recalled the meeting with Haig and the latter's proposition as to price-fixing.

"I would like to take Mr. Haig over to Holabird and show him just where we were when he said he had a 'bellyful' of doing business with the Government at cost, and proposed that we split the business three ways," Sabine said yesterday.

Haig to Be Summoned.

The committee will summon Haig to appear in person at a later date, but will hear Woodside today.

Comptroller General McCarl yesterday sent to Assistant Secretary of War Woodring a ruling on the latter's antilobbying order.

It was understood that McCarl's decision will permit other firms to compete with the Chevrolet Motor Co. for contracts on motorized equipment to be brought through a PWA allocation.

The end of the fiscal year falls on Saturday, so prompt action was ex-

Marie Dressler's Condition Critical

Doctors Hold Little Hope for Star's Recovery.

Santa Barbara, Calif., June 27 (AP).—The condition of Marie Dressler, veteran actress of the stage and screen, who is confined at the home of friends here, suffering from a complication of ailments, took a turn for the worse this afternoon. It was announced little hope for her recovery was held.

A constant vigil was being maintained at her bedside.

Miss Dressler is suffering from a heart and kidney ailment. She has been in ill health for more than two years.

Eugenia Bankhead to Marry Morton Hoyt for Fourth Time

Love—take it from often-wed Eugenia Bankhead—is a bright-plumed bird, and its true course just now is to sun-washed Nice, in the French Riviera, where, as soon as possible, she will wed Morton Hoyt, Washington clubman, for the fourth time.

Hoyt is seriously ill at his Nice hotel, and conflicting reports of his condition came throughout the day to Miss Bankhead, who referred to herself constantly as "Mrs. Hoyt," although she last was divorced from Hoyt in 1929.

"I know now Morton is the only man I ever loved, and I'm going to marry him again as soon as I get him well," sighed Miss Bankhead in her suite at the Mayflower Hotel.

Gathering her pet monkey, Narcissus, unto her much as a child might clasp her favorite doll, Miss Bankhead made feverish preparations to leave for France as soon as possible. Early yesterday she planned to fly to New York and board the Aquitania, but later she decided to postpone her trip several days.

"Morton can't die; he simply can't and won't," said Miss Bankhead, fondling Narcissus, who perched on her shoulder. "He's going to get well. We'll get him well, the sun, the doctors and I.

"Anyhow, he couldn't die without me. He's never done anything without me, you see."

Three of Miss Bankhead's previous six marriages have been to Hoyt. The couple first stepped to the altar in 1920. That union was annulled. They were remarried a few months later. In 1928 they were divorced, but remarried the same year. Another divorce followed in 1929.

With Hoyt reported at the point of death, Miss Bankhead left a house party at Bay Head, Md. Refused admission to her former quarters, in the Dupont Circle Apartments, because she insisted on bringing Narcissus with her, Miss Bankhead took rooms in the Mayflower. She soon was surrounded by friends, who helped her prepare for her journey. "I've sent three cablegram to Morton's hotel, and received not a single answer," asserted Miss Bankhead anxiously. "But when he's well we'll be married."

Miss Bankhead patted Narcissus. "Make a face at him, please," she requested. "He minds better when people do, and it amuses him immensely."

Fate With Jury

NORMA MILLEN, whose fate on charges of being accessory to crimes for which three men have been condemned, was placed yesterday in the hands of a jury.

Bandit Bride's Fate Up to Jury; Feared Gang

Case Against Young Wife of Bank Killer Ends; Mind Called "Young."

Dedham, Mass., June 27 (AP).—The spectacular case of Norma Brighton Millen, pretty but woe-begone bride of a killer, was placed in the hands of a jury early tonight.

Her trial began last Wednesday but her rocky road began nearly five months ago when detectives corralled three of the most audacious killers in the history of the State. One was her husband, Murton Millen. Another was Murton's brother Irving, and the third was Abraham Faber, erudite scholar and marksman who later turned cry-baby.

Nineteen-year-old Norma is charged with being an accessory after the fact in the robbery of the Needham Trust Co. and the slaying of two policemen who fell before machine gun fire. Her husband and his two confederates recently were convicted of murder and now await the mandatory death sentence.

Events moved swiftly today as Norma went to the stand to complete her re-direct examination at the hands of her attorney, George A. Douglas, and answered a few final questions of District Attorney Edmund R. Dewing. The defense had continually stressed Norma's childish ways, contended that her mind was "young" for her age and that she had a decided liking for dolls.

Douglas, in his summation, argued the State had not proved that she aided and abetted Abraham Faber, and if she did have knowledge, she might have been killed had she informed authorities.

The case was given to the jury at 3:48 (Eastern standard time) and it immediately retired to deliberate.

Tugwell Calls 'Partnership' New Deal Aim

Intends to Work With Individuals, Industry Alike, He Says.

Speaks Before Bankers in Iowa as Tour Starts.

Des Moines, Iowa, June 27 (Spl.).—The essence of the New Deal is the determination that the Government shall become an active and intelligent partner—helping not only big business, but farmers, workers, investers and consumers, Rexford G. Tugwell, Undersecretary of Agriculture, told an audience of 1,800 Iowa bankers and their guests here tonight.

Outlining a "social management" program for the country, Tugwell opened his speaking tour of the agricultural area with the promise that "we are moving, after a period of reaction, into a new cooperative age."

The Undersecretary, after presenting a general picture of the proposed "partnership" of government and business, took up the immediate problems of the drought-pinched Middle West. After visiting the cornfields of the Henry Wallace Farm, near Des Moines, and paying a hight tribute to his chief, the Secretary of Agriculture, Tugwell told of determined efforts on the part of the Administration to halt the advance of the chinch bug.

The Administration spokesman also announced he will carry the gospel of the New Deal to several States in the Northwest, and along the Pacific Coast.

"American Mixture."

Tugwell declared the "social management" program a distinctly "American mixture." It is comprised, he said, of "mass production, machine processes, scientific management, constant invention, scope for initiative, democratic methods, decentralized administration and judgment by results."

He explained that he called his program one of "social management" rather than "blueprint planning," because the latter "implies a guidance of all a nation's activity toward the single goal of making the blueprint a reality."

"To this kind of planning," he said, "any one who believed in experiment must object.

"There is another kind of planning, however, to which liberals and experimentalists can consent. It involves looking forward, and it in-

Harriman Gets 4½-Year Term

Banker Was Convicted of Causing False Book Entries.

New York, June 27 (AP).—Joseph W. Harriman, former president of the Harriman National Bank & Trust Co., was sentenced to 4½ years in prison today on a conviction of causing false entries in the books of the bank.

Harriman was convicted by a Federal court jury last Tuesday on 16 counts of an indictment charging falsification of the bank's records and misapplication of funds of the bank.

Execution of his sentence was stayed until next Tuesday morning to permit him to apply to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for a further stay.

The former banker and his family took the sentence calmly.

Before sentence was pronounced two physicians testified briefly regarding the condition of Harriman, who is 67 year old. One said that the ordinary rigors of prison life might result in a serious heart attack. The other testified the banker was suffering from deterioration of the central nervous system.

President Signs Bill Giving U. S. Workers $40,000,000 Pay Rise

Recovery Cost Made Election Fight Issue

Buchanan Estimates Total U. S. Spending at $7,526,382,866, Draws Fire of G. O. P. Chiefs, Who Charge New Deal "Orgy."

By Robert C. Albright.

Estimates of Federal spending in the name of recovery clashed headon yesterday on Capitol Hill, as "pump priming" emergency dollars became the focal point of the pre-election campaign.

House Appropriations Chairman James P. Buchanan called down the wrath of Republican leaders by computing Congressional appropriations for normal and emergency operations at $7,526,382,866.

Charging an unprecedented spending "orgy," Representative Chester C. Bolton, of Ohio, chairman of the Republican Congressional campaign committee, declared appropriations and contingent obligations are nearer $28,000,000,000 since President Roosevelt came into office.

Republican Leader Bertrand H. Snell backed him up with a statement alleging outlays averaging $19,000,000 a day by the New Deal for the last fiscal year, with daily income averaging only $8,000,000.

Snell assailed the last Democratic Congress as "merely a rubber stamp for the Executive."

"It was content, even eager, upon receiving orders from the Executive end of the Government, to abase itself until it has become a body with less power than some of the bureaus and bureaucrats which have been set up by reason of its abdication," he said.

Insisting the Administration's prime motive "is not recovery of material prosperity, but a complete reconstruction of our entire economic system," he quoted from writings of President Roosevelt and Undersecretary of Agriculture Rexford Guy Tugwell.

Representative Buchanan countered with a slap at Republican estimates of New Deal costs, which he charged are "misleading" and "exaggerated."

"Exaggerated statements do not aid recovery," he said. "They tend to retard it by unduly frightening

Glass Fed Man For Insurance, Officials Told

Authorities Will Probe Victim's Story of New Racket.

Unfolding a story of having been fed ground glass in food that was procured at a lunchroom, George Kish, former soldier, of Newark, N. J., yesterday precipitated an investigation of an insurance "racket" here. He presented Assistant United States Attorney John R. Fitzpatrick an affidavit embodying his charges.

Kish declared he was introduced to a man here last month through a friend with whom he had been in the Army. After several meetings, Kish said, he was promised a position and the trio went to the lunchroom to eat.

Kish indicated he wished dessert. One of his companions went to the counter to get it.

"They only have rice pudding," the friend reported. Kish said he would take that. While he was eating his mouth was cut by broken glass. One of his acquaintances placed the glass in a napkin and showed it to a waiter.

The waiter is alleged to have exclaimed, "Sure, that's glass! You're liable to find anything in here." "This will be good evidence," one of Kish's companions replied.

According to Kish, he was then taken to a private physician who treated him for mouth cuts and sent him to a hospital, where he was visited by one of his com-

Mrs. Darby's Appeal Lost In Note Case

High Court Says Lawyer's Error New Trial in $12,324 Suit.

Although admitting that "judgment below should have gone for the appellant," the District Court of Appeals, in a 3-to-2 opinion yesterday, affirmed a decision of the District Court of Appeals holding Mrs. Bessie D. Darby, 3510 Macomb street northwest, liable on a $12,324 promissory note, while declaring her signature on the note "disclosed to the inexpert, untrained eye a positive and gross forgery."

Mrs. Darby and her husband, John Gardner Darby, were sued on the note by the Montgomery County National Bank, Rockville, Md., where Darby was formerly employed. In her answer, Mrs. Darby denied she had signed or promised to pay the note. When her husband testified, he refused to answer questions concerning his wife's signature on the ground his answer might tend to incriminate him. There was a "complete failure of proof" on the part of the bank, the appellate court said.

Attorney is Blamed.

However, a technical slip-up by Mrs. Darby's attorney in failing to take an exception to the decision was listed as fatal to her case.

"In these circumstances, judgement should have gone for the appellant, and we would have felt impelled to reverse on the ground the decision was clearly wrong except for the rule that where

Soviet Wedding Bells Ring For First Time in Washington

The first Soviet wedding in Washington history was held yesterday in the Russian Embassy, with G. Gokhman, consul of the embassy, officiating.

In the simple, civil services, which consist principally of signing documents and swearing to their accuracy, Dr. Valentine S. Malitsky, 38, and Miss Marie Correll, 32, of 1743 P street northwest, were married.

Clad in white and wearing a corsage of lilies, Miss Correll, employed in the women's division of the Labor Department, signed the necessary papers and laid aside her pen. Dr. Malitsky did likewise. Gokhman then pronounced them man and wife. The ceremonies were in Russian.

Dr. Malitsky and his bride met two years ago when they were attending Brookings Institution. He has just completed four years at the University of Minnesota, where he specialized in agricultural economics. Miss Correll is a graduate of Manhattan College, in Manhattan, Kansas, and the University of Wisconsin. She has been associated with the Labor Department for about four years.

The town of Gorki, near Moscow, is Dr. Malitsky's home. Miss Correll is a native of Manhattan, Kans.

A friend of Dr. Malitsky, Karl White, of New York, acted as best man, and Miss Myrtle Starr, with whom Miss Correll lived, was maid of honor.

Dr. Malitsky and his bride will live in Washington until autumn, when they will leave for Harbin, Manchukuo. After a brief stop, they will go to Moscow, where Dr. Malitsky will work for the Soviet Government.

Municipal Court Judge Robert E. Mattingly later performed a second ceremony for the couple.

Action Is Taken On 155 Measures

National Planning Work Discussed by Leaders at White House.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

An estimated $40,000,000 in increased pay will go into the pockets of Governmetn employes during the next fiscal year, under provisions of a bill signed yesterday by President Roosevelt.

The new law provides that all employes entitled to automatic promotions will receive credit for their service during the period promotions were suspended by the economy act.

District school teachers, policemen and firemen, the personnel of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps, the postal service and certain employes of the customs and immigration services—all are affected.

Continuing the breath-taking pace that he hopes will enable him to leave Saturday for Hawaii, the President yesterday announced action on 155 bills, launched new surveys into National planning, and prepared a report to the Nation by radio tonight.

31 Bills Vetoed.

Among the bills were 31 vetoes, all of minor nature, which were accompanied again by terse notations giving the reasons for their disapproval. In this the President followed his precedent of the day before, refusing to take advantage of the "pocket veto."

The increased pay measure, of particular importance to the District, was introduced by Representative Arthur P. Lamneck (Democrat), of Ohio, and originally limited its benefits to the postal service. Subsequently it was broadened to include the other services, Senator Carl Hayden (Democrat), of Arizona, leading the fight in the Senate.

Automatic promotions, suspended July 1, 1932, by rigid provisions of the economy act, were restored under another act on March 28, 1934. But this restoration made no allowance for giving those on Government rolls during the suspension

One Killed, 8 Hurt in Storm

Lightning Causes Serious Baltimore Fire; Houses Are Unroofed.

Baltimore, June 27 (Spl.).—A devastating electrical storm swept over Baltimore today, lightning killing a man and causing a five-alarm fire in a downtown paper warehouse as a tornado unroofed houses and blew over a building, injuring eight persons.

The fire started when lightning struck the warehouse of Shapiro & Co. in the wholesale paper district.

The blaze swept through five floors, tying up street car traffic in the elevated tracks over Guilford avenue.

Lightning which struck a tree in Druid Hill Park also fatally injured an unidentified colored man.

According to the Weather Bureau, two storms seemed to meet over the western section of the city, ripping through an area a mile square, blowing roofs from houses, ripping porches from dwellings and causing several small fires.

A building in the 700 block Poplar Grove street was wrecked. A young woman, two Chinese and five men were injured as the structure collapsed.

A total of 1:22 inches of rain fell during the storm.

Fredericksburg, Va., June 27 (Spl.).—A barn on the farm of Ben Polglaise, 3 miles west of here, was burned after being struck by lightning in the thunderstorm this afternoon. Thirty-seven tons of hay were destroyed. The damage was $800.

period credit fo rthat time of service in computing their right to automatic promotions.

Important Messages Pending.

All of the other measures passed upon were of comparatively little significance, but last night the President, continuing his work far into the night in the seclusion of the White House proper, was to write his final decisions on the last important bills, including the farm mortgage moratorium and housing measures.

Little doubt was held that he would approve the housing bill, which represents a hard-fought Administration victory, and observers were almost equally confident he would refuse to sign the farm bill, which is understood to have drawn negative reports from the Attorney General and the Department of Agriculture.

Announcement of their approval or rejection is expected today, when the President also will give consideration to a host of pending appointments, including the formation of the new Stock Exchange Commission and a new board to govern communications. The ten-day time limit for action on both bills expires tomorrow.

Remarking that he intended to complete action on the 16 bills still before him last night, the President declined to indicate any decisions in advance. This reticence also went for the memberships of the new commissions, which will be selected from what the President termed a huge folder full of names.

Discusses Works Program.

After receiving a lengthy list of callers, many of whom added to the folder, the Chief Executive went over the public works program for the next fiscal year with Administrator Harold L. Ickes. Then he mapped out studies of National planning with other recovery leaders.

The latter conference, which lasted much of the afternoon, strengthened the belief the President will devote a considerable part of his radio address at 9:30 tonight to this subject. He is also erpected to give an accounting of progress and, possibly, to reassure business.

National planners present included Ickes, Secretaries Wallace, Perkins and Morgenthau, and Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins. The President outlined his viwes for research during the summer, it was said, anxious that work go forward during his long absence.

Returning the first part of August, the President himself will direct the investigation, which embraces social insurance as well as physical development of the Nation. Out of it is expected to come proposals for legislation at the next session of Congress.

Credit Union Act Signed.

Among the bills approved by the President was an act providing for the incorporation of associations for the purpose of borrowing money from Government agencies. It would set up a Federal credit union system of such groups, which would provide a further market for Federal securities.

Philippine Health Chief Fearful of Cholera Outbreak

Manila, June 27 (AP).—Steps to prevent a cholera outbreak in Manila and nearby districts were taken by health authorities tonight in combatting an epidemic of intestinal disease, which already has taken several lives and caused the closing of numerous eating places.

Pronouncing the malady an outbreak of gastro-interitis, Dr. Jacabo Fajardo, insular director of health, said the situation did not "justify belief in the existence of cholera," but said all cases would be treated as cholera suspects with the same preventative measures as those used against the dreaded malady.

Dr. Fajardo conceded the possibility that cholera might follow the intestinal disease and other physicians said the probabilities pointed toward an outbreak of the scourge in the Philippines this year.

Many thousands of persons have lost their lives in various cholera epidemics in the islands since they came under the American flag in 1898. The most disastrous outbreak was in the early days of American occupation, before modern health and sanitation measures were in operation. In that epidemic 168,000 persons died. Fatalities resulted in 80 per cent of the cases.

Congress and the Police Stop Rooster's Crowing.

Even a crowing rooster must face Congressional censorship.

Clementine Jones, of 2430 F street northwest, kept a bantam rooster in her back yard. The rooster, it seems, awakened early in the morning, much to the indignation of slumbering neighbors.

The woman was arraigned before Gus A. Schuldt in Police Court yesterday following numerous complaints. The charge read:

"Clementine Jones, then and there being the owner and possessor of a certain fowl, to wit, a rooster, which by crowing did disturb the peace and comfort of the neighborhood ,contrary to an act of Congress and police regulations."

So by an act of Congress and police interference, the rooster is now in exile. It was sent to a "counsin in the country."

Text of British Debt Note

Full text of the British debt note follows:

After careful consideration of the note which you addressed to Sir Ronald Lindsay on June 12, his majesty's government in the United Kingdom feel that there are two questions to which it may be useful to make further reference.

In the first place, his majesty's government would observe that in their note of June 4 they did not state that payment of the British war debt was legally contingent upon payment of the debts due to them. What they said was that it would be impossible for them to contemplate a situation in which they would be called on to honor in full their war obligations to others, while continuing to suspend all demands for payment of the war obligations due to them. This was a statement not of law but of fact.

Secondly, as regards the suggested payments in kind, his majesty's government would recall that the experience of German reparations showed that transfer difficulties are not solved by a system of deliveries in kind. As the committee presided over by Gen. Dawes pointed out in 1924: "In their financial effects deliveries in kind are not really distinguishable from cash payments." In fact, the economic objections to cash payments would apply with equal force to deliveries in kind, unless those deliveries were to consist of indigenous products of the debtor country (excluding reexports), and unless they were to be accepted by the creditor country and consumed by it in addition to the goods taken from the debtor country in the normal course of trade. If the United Kingdom were not to receive payment for goods exported on commercial account, her exchange resources available to purchase cotton and other goods from America would be still further diminished. Therefore, while not unwilling to give further consideration to possibilities in this direction, his majesty's government do not at present see any method of putting such a plan into practice which would be likely to commend itself to the Government of the United States of America.

In the view of his majesty's government, the primary question for settlement is the amount that should be paid, having regard to all the circumstances of these debts. They regret that up to the present it has not been possible to make further progress in this matter, but they will welcome the opportunity of resuming the discussion whenever it may appear that the present abnormal conditions have so far passed away as to offer favorable prospects for a settlement, since they are always anxious to remove from the sphere of controversy all or any matters which might disturb the harmonious relations between the two countries.

British Reject Hull's Plan For Debt Payment in Kind

payments in kind to an extent that might be found mutually practicable and agreeable."

Secretary Hull also took exception to the British argument that to pay us Great Britain would have to collect what was due her from her debtors. The Hull note emphasized that there was no connection between what was owed to Great Britain and what she owed to us.

"Statement of Facts."

The British note, delivered yesterday, signed by F. L. G. Osborne, counselor of the British Embassy and charge d'affaires in the absence of Sir Roland Lindsay, the British Ambassador, replied to both of these points.

It said that the British had not suggested that payments due the United States were legally contingent upon payments due to Great Britain. The point made, the note added, was that Great Britain could not contemplate paying us while continuing to suspend sums due from her debtors.

"This was a statement not of law but of facts," the reply said in a tone of some asperity.

As for the payments in kind, the note quoted the Dawes committee report of 1924 that "in their financial effects deliveries in kind are really not distinguishable from cash payments."

Then the note, while expressing willingness "to give further consideration to possibilities in this direction," remarked that the British "do not at present see any method of putting such a plan into practice."

Amount Held Paramount.

The concluding paragraph stressed "the amount that should be paid" as the paramount question, regretted the lack of progress hitherto and repeated that the British government will welcome an opportunity "of resuming the discussion whenever it may appear that the present abnormal conditions have so far passed away as to offer favorable prospects for a settlement. * * *"

This again closes the door which the State Department hoped to hold open, even by a crack, in angling for a definite proposal. Unless some new approach can be found, the debts now pass finally into the limbo of the gone if not forgotten.

Secretary Hull had no illusions about collecting in kind. He cited that, mainly, to buttress his argument, that it was up to the debtor to make us an offer. That has not been done. The latest note makes it appear that it is up to the United States to offer new terms. There is a possibility that Secretary Hull will add to the exchange by restating, more flatly than ever, that it is for the British to come forward—that we expect and await such a move.

Practically, however, the debts are a dead issue. The Johnson act, branding as a defaulter, and denying access to our capital markets to, any debtor nation which failed to pay June 15 debt installmens in full, killed the last hope of rationalizing the debts.

Viewpoints Far Apart.

The nearest to an offer made by the British was last fall when they tentatively suggested a 90 per cent write-off to correspond to the 90 per cent write-off of German reparations in the Lausanne agreement The Treasury, which dickered with Sir Frederick Leith-Ross and other British representatives, refused even to discuss so great a reduction.

Since then, the viewpoints have remained so far apart as to make further conversations futile. The same situation continues. In effect, the British now say that the question is not how to pay but how much to pay—and their tentatively expressed view of how much to pay is too low to be discussed, in the opinion of Treasury officials. If they thought Congress could be induced to accept even a fractional [illegible]t, leading Administration officials would eagerly agree to it. But they assume that Congress is still dominated by the "last red cent" attitude of Hiram Johnson.

Now that all the debtors, save Finland, which has a write-down of her small debt pending, have suspended payments, the whole regime of intergovernmental debts is for all practical purposes ended. First came the breakdown of German reparations, then the Hoover moratorium, then the virtual extinguishing of reparations at Lausanne, the suspension of all intergovernmental payments abroad, and now, finally, the end of payments to the United States.

Gen. Johnson's Kin Faces Land Suit

Bankrupt Firm Trustee Seeks Recovery.

Muskogee, Okla., Jne 27 (AP).—A suit described by the plaintiff as "just the customary form petition" to establish whether there had been any preference shown between creditors of a bankrupt firm has been filed here against Mrs. Elizabeth M. Johnston, mother of Hugh S. Johnston, NRA administrator.

The petitioner, Henry R. Duncan, of Tlsa, is trustee for the bankrupt Major Oil Co., of Muskogee. Duncan seeks to recover lands which once were the property of the company.

Officials allege that the land was deeded to Mrs. Johnson by her son, Alex Johnston, president of the firm, when the company was insolvent.

Conviction Remanded In "Prayer Murder"

Austin, Tex., June 27 (AP).—The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals today remanded the case of Sherman Clayton, convicted in Cass County of murder in the "prayer healing" death of his daughter, Bernice, 3½ years old.

Clayton was sentenced to eight years' imprisonment. The girl died December 19, 1932, after three days and three nights of prayer service in the backwoods home of the Claytons.

Gang Kidnaps Union Leader In Mill Strike

him back to Harriman. He decided he had taken enough punishment for one day and went on to Chattanooga.

Union Demands Troops.

Offices of the hosiery union in Philadelphia wired Gov. Hill McAlister demanding a declaration of martial law and punishment of the kidnapers. The Governor directed his office to call a conference as soon as possible to investigate the situation.

In the meantime, the situation here was reported as tense. Several fights occurred during the day between strikers and workers who lost their jobs when the mills closed Monday.

More than 300, it was claimed by Floyd Johnson, president of the local textile workers' union, have been on a strike since last October. More than 500 of the group to lose their jobs with the mill's closing paraded today. The parade ended at the Tennessee Emergency Relief Administration, where leaders asked for Government relief.

Plea to Roosevelt.

Mayor J. C. D'Armand and the city council sent a telegram to President Roosevelt and Administrator Johnson asking appointment of a mediation board, composed of two men representing labor, two representing the mill, and one the city.

Mayor D'Armand said he would ask mill officials if they would meet Johnson's two requests.

These points are:

That the mills hire needy Harriman men in preference to persons living 25 miles or farther from Harriman. Fifty of these must be strikers.

That where two or more persons from the same family are on the pay roll, adjustments be made so as to give needy Harriman men and women [illegible]bs.

panions who allegedly was accompanied by a lawyer.

Kish said that he was asked to sign a paper. He declined, he informed Fitzpatrick, until he was assured that the paper was merely a contract authorizing the lawyer to go ahead with the case. Discharged later from the hospital, he was informed that the hospital and doctor's bills had been paid. A repetition of the "glass-eating" episode occurred, and a stranger warned Kish.

"It doesn't matter how badly they hurt or cripple a man, so long as the ycollect the money," the stranger was quoted as telling Kish. This stranger told Kish he also had been used as a dupe.

Confronting one of his friends with the man's charge, Kish said the friend admitted he had placed the glass in his food.

"Yes," the friend said, "what about it? I you don't go along with us, we will prove in court that you put the glass in there yourself."

Kish reported the matter to the insurance agent representing the lunchroom, who notified the district attorney.

Daily Funeral Scheduled Saturday in Philadelphia

Mr. Daily was born in Philadelphia, but came to Washington with his parents when 8 years old and made this city his permanent home. He had been ill several months and was removed to the hospital about six weeks ago while in the employ of the Washington Herald as a copy editor.

'Partnership' Is New Deal Aim, Tugwell Tells Iowa Bankers

"Democratic Process."

"But it does not involve rigid theoretical commitment to a finished system. It recognizes the fluidity and the complexity of human events, and it asks for, instead of rejecting, creativeness.

"I think of it as a democratic rather than an autocratic process.

"Social management, democratically conceived, would involve the social organization of the processes of production and distribution, taking advantage of ordinary and useful motives—with reduced stress on the monetary one, which seems to me to have been overemphasized—and existing machinery and methods to achieve, first, a wider distribution and use of goods, and later—for this is likely to occupy our generation—whatever further aims seem desirable."

Two of the emergency branches of the present Administration—NRA and AAA—were declared by Tugwell to be "cases exactly in point."

"Neither," he said, "involves planning in the forced sense. Both are voluntary; but both provide certain compulsions for minorities when cooperation is withheld. Both take advantage of our own institutions, and both compel recognition of the need for widely social as against individual and group action. Both ought to raise the levels of ordinary living.

Subject to Changes.

"The situation will build itself up out of these materials and methods, checked by a good deal of careful research and measurement. What may happen from there on illustrates the flexible and experimental nature of the proceeding. If certain results are bad, in view of the general objective, changes will be made. That is part of the democratic nature of our approach to change.

"Social management is not something, therefore, that is conceived once for all in an academic mind, and laid down as a rule. It is a process of seeing what is to be done and doing it—of general recognition of what is best to be done and seeing to it that the mechanism for doing it is kept responsive."

Tugwell listed "the management prolbems which are set for us immediately" as of two sorts.

"One," he said, "has to do with the physical betterment of the Nation, with the use of the land, with forests, water conservation, power from running streams, the relocation of industries and homes—the general rebuilding of productive and living equipment.

Hits Foes of AAA.

"The other has to do with the establishment of new, more just and more stable relationships among producing organizations.

"What we need to establish is interchangeability among groups, a rule by which we can trade things with each other so that every one may gain by it.

"We have all discovered by now that no one can gain immunity from the consequences of a general breakdown—that is, in the long run. I conceive that defenses against general disaster may grow out of the machinery set up in AAA and NRA. In one case, farmers, and in the other, industrialists, have in these organizations forums for composing differences and discovering ways to coooperate for this purpose."

Tugwell assailed big packers, canners and millers and milk distributors for their opposition to the defeated AAA amendments, which would have given the Secretary of Agriculture broader licensing powers.

"We have not yet found ways to fix relationships so that one group may not exploit others," he said.

Outlines Changes.

"It is a misple concept which contemplates such a just and understood relationship among men and groups that none shall be exploited and that all shall enjoy the fruits of our modern victories over nature.

"Simple as this concept is, however, we have hitherto faile l to provide the mechanisms through which we might approach again, in characteristic and democratic fashion, the ends which all of us have in view. If the changes which have taken place recently can in any sense be called revolutionary, they consist merely in this:

"That for the first time we have undertaken, with the earnestness we use in other affairs, to approach reform in our social relationships which may provide equality of opportunity and higher levels of living."

"The social management which I have in mind," he said, "might be directed toward that immediate achievement without doing violence to any of our notions of what is American or what is common to our generally accepted objectives."

Pecora Picked To Head Stock Control Board

Bankers' Nemesis Is Held Certain Choice of Mr. Roosevelt.

(Associated Press.)

At the top of a list of prospective members of the new stock exchange control commission yesterday was written the name of Ferdinand Pecora as chairman.

Word went to President Roosevelt that Pecora, counsel for the Senate Banking Committee whcih conducted the long inquiry into stock market practices, would be willing to serve one year as chairman. His appointment seemed likely.

Another who has been conceded a virtually certain place is James M. Landis, Federal Trade Commissioner. Landis had much to do with writing the stock change measure.

Numerous other names have been submitted to the President, among them other members of the Federal Trade Commission.

Mr. Roosevelt gave considerable thought to the make-up of the commission today between bill signing, vetoing, speech writing and dealing with labor disputes.

Fire Wins

Preceded Blast, Says Court, So Merchant Collects

The question of whether a fire caused an explosion, or an explosion caused a fire was determined yesterday by a ury in the District Supreme Court in returning a decision granting Jacob Levin, 1300 Eleventh street southeast, a verdict for $16,500 against four fire insurance companies.

The companies contended a fire in Levin's store, February, 1933, was caused by an explosion, for which they were not to be held liable. On the other hand, Levin, through the law firm of Simon, Koenigsberger & Young, claimed the fire started first, with a resulting explosion. The jury determined the fire preceded the explosion and awarded Levin the value of his policies.

The case was determined by a jury in Chief Justice A. A. Wheat's court.

British Jam Lid On Discussions Over Big Navy

London Asks Americans to Keep Details of Meetings Secret.

London, June 27 (AP).—Obviously disturbed by the reaction to their big navy program, British diplomats today clamped down the lid of secrecy on their discussions with representatives of the United States.

They asked the American delegates not to reveal the status of the discussions in preparation for the 1935 naval conference, and the Americans agreed.

Henceforth, only a communique will reveal what is being said, thus assuring for the time being at last the withholding of information from the public.

Raps Publishing of Policy.

The resentment of the British Cabinet over the publication last week of the British policy was well illustrated in the House of Commons today as Stanley Baldwin, lord president of the council, replied to questions.

An opposition member said that there is a "great deal of interest and anxiety" as to whether Britain made "definite suggestions" to the United States.

"The conversations are entirely confidential," Baldwin replied, "and there is no shorter road to failure for any conference than to tell before the time is ripe what is being done."

The British insistence on secrecy was puzzling in view of the speech Saturday of Sir Bolton Eyres Monsell, first lord of the admiralty, in which he said that disarmament is a dream.

No Word From Tokyo.

The result of the secrecy order was shown in the newsless communique issued today.

"As the Prime Minister will shortly be leaving London for a three-month holiday," it said, "a further full meeting of those engaged in the Anglo-American conversations concerning the forthcoming naval conference was held at the House of Commons today."

In the absence of Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, Baldwin hereafter will act as chairman of the discussions.

No further word has been received from Tokyo, and Baldwin said in the House today in answer to a question that the Japanese have not yet asked parity.

Trammell's Return To Senate Certain

Jacksonville, Fla., June 27 (AP).—Almost complete reports from yesterday's Democratic primary gave virtual assurance tonight that Park Trammell will be returned to the United States Senate for a fourth term.

With only 34 mostly small country precincts missing, the unofficial vote was 100,441 for Trammell and 95,686 for Claude Pepper, who based his campaign on a challenge of the junior Senator's legislative record.

The murder of an Austrian archduke meant little to the world at large 20 years ago today. Apparently few had the least notion that it meant the outbreak of the World War a month later. But on June 28, 1914, Archduke Ferdinand and his wife were murdered at Sarajevo. Consquent hatreds were quickly fanned into declaration of war. Above is The Post account of that date.

Recovery Cost Is Made Issue In Congressional Vote Fight

business and making the individual timid by believing that the Government is entering upon commitments which it can not finance without oppressive taxation and Government regulation."

Estimating the current cost of recovery at $4,400,000,000, Chairman Buchanan said his $7,526,382,866 total did not include $500,000,000 made available from RFC funds for emergency relief, or $1,500,000,000 in securities the RFC was authorized to issue to broaden its loan base.

$9,526,382,866 Maximum.

The slight, thin-faced Texan, who started out to make an economy record for his committee before recovery spending dashed his hopes, incorporated these RFC allotments in a second $9,526,382,866 figure, which, he said, represented the "total of obligations at the maximum, both for appropriations and additional RFC funds."

Republican members of the Appropriations Committee, like Bolton and Representative John Taber, of New York, insist Buchanan made no allowance for such contingent liabilities as Congress incurred by guaranteeing $4,000,000,000 in Home Loan and Farm Credit bonds.

The Texan concedes there were authorizations "which may require appropriations in future years," but he argues:

"These authorizations will not enter into the fiscal picture until they materialize into estimates of appropriations upon which future Congresses will have to pass before there is any direct obligation against the Treasury of the United States. They should not no wbe included as a charge against the Treasury or the public debt. To do so is misleading."

Buchanan, offering the first "official" tabulation of last session's outlays, said President Roosevelt can stay well within his original $16,500,000,000 gross allotment for the two years ending next June.

Cites Drought Cost.

On the other hand, he said, it is possible the entire $16,500,000,000 might be spent by June 30, 1935, with an additional $1,000,000,000 tacked on to pay for "disarrangements" brought about by the drought and upsets in legislative plans.

He said the $7,439,955,533 appropriated this session represents an increase of $86,427,332 over budget estimates but he held it unlikely that $100,000,000 added by the Senate for financing the Agriculture Department's cotton holdings will be spent. Thus, he argues, there may be a net decrease under budget estimates of $13,572,667.

The Texan declared it would be "money well expended" if the cost of defeating the depression should approximate one-fourth of the $23,400,000,000 spent by the United States in the World War. The American people, he said, "do not begrudge the outlays."

Hits Roosevelt's Powers.

Bolton took forthright exception to Buchanan's statement. He said in two years Congress has built up Government obligations $5,000,000,000 in excess of the National debt at the time President Roosevelt took office. He said $19,000,000,000 was appropriated outright.

Through lump sum appropriations and delegations of authority, he said Congress has "capitulated" and transferred appropriating powers to the President.

"Such practice is absolutely un-American and undemocratic, and, while defended on the ground of a National emergency, is absolutely pernicious in the extent to which it has been carried," he said.

Furthermore, he stated, the Administration has failed to provide the wherewithal to meet the new bills, and is letting current revenues "fall far short of Government cost of operation."

Warns of Rising Costs.

He added:

"The people must eventually pay the way, and if definite plans are not established to meet the rising cost of government and to provide for carrying out our current National debt charges, either through drastic reductions in Government operations or by increased taxation, we will have not only seriously threatened our National credit, but mortgaged the future generations to a point where the development and progress of our country will be retarded for many, many years."

Representative Snell said he was willing to accept the Democratic challenge to make the campaign battle along broad lines of the New Deal, rather than along strictly conventional party lines.

Labor Defense to Celebrate.

Harvey O'Connor, author; Berhard Ades, Baltimore attorney, and others will speak at a meeting at 8 p. m. today at Pythian Hall, Twelfth and U streets northwest, celebrating the ninth anniversary of the International Labor Defense.

Mrs. Darby Held Liable for Note

there is in the record no special finding, no motion for judgemment, and no exceptions, there is nothing a appellate court ca review, and that was the ground of our former decision," the decision said.

"That the result is one of serious hardship to appellant may not be denied, nor can we lose sight of the fact that our decision confirms a judgement against her which, in the light of the facts shown in the certificate of evidence, the bank was not entitled to have, and if we were at liberty to do so, we should unhesitatingly order a new trial. On proper motion our mandate will be stayed pending application to the supreme court for a review of our decision."

In a dissenting opinion, Associate Justice Van Orsdel pointed out that "the only thing lacking, for which the defendant should not be penalized, and wholly due to the negligence of her counsel, was the failure to move for judgment at the conclusion of the trial—followed, of course—by exception if it was refused.

"The lasting humility imposed upon defendant and her innocent children by a criminal husband and ftaher, imposes sufficient burden upon them without adding to their total impoverishment through his criminal act. Can it be that justice is so blind that an insignificant technical error estops a court of justice from extending the relief here so convincingly demanded."

Hitz Raps Procedure.

In a second dissenting opinion, Associate Justice Hitz said: "The record filed here contains sufficient material to review the matter on its merits, but the opinion of the court holds that this can not be done because it was not sanctified by the proper rhetorical ritual. . . . If counsel, instead of taking his appeal from the finding and judgment as announced, had made certain formal but futile and unnecessary motions, and had then proclaimed an exception to their denial, his appeal from a repetition of the judge's announcement, or from a nod of the judge's head, which is probably all he would have got, must have brought a reversal here instead of an affirmance.

"This is putting too high a value on making two bites of a cherry, and the denial of a review here of a judgment acknowledged to be wrong here, because of the trial court and counsel, in a common effort to dispatch business, omitted a futile formula of words, is to sacrifice the substance of justice to the shadow. I dissent from the judgment and opinion of the court."

Trial Stratosphere Hop Plans Progress

pected today by Woodring's office. The Comptroller General's decision had not reached the War Department at the close of business yesterday, but Representative Goss (Republican), Connecticut, was advised it had been sent, and that it was favorable to a "loosening up" on competitive bidding.

Woodring's order that no firm or its subsidiary employing lobbyists to get Government business could compete for War Department contracts had resulted in restricting competition on the PWA trucks to Chevrolet. The committee desired and Woodring consented to lift the restriction temporarily, if McCarl ruled this legal.

The House investigators, after hearing Woodside today, expected to turn again to the case of Col. Joseph I. McMullen, who had admitted receiving fees from the Cuban-American Manganese Co., of New York, while on active duty in the Judge Advocate General's office. Col. McMullen himself will not be called today.

Dillinger Aid Taken Asleep In Minneapolis

Man Who Aided Flight of Outlaw Seized by U. S. Agents.

Minneapolis, June 27 (AP).—The law captured a pawn in the John Dillinger game today, but again failed to checkmate the king—the arch felon who broke out of jail with a toy pistol at Crown Point, Ind.

Weary from ceaseless flight from the law, Albert "Pat" Reilly, diminutive former baseball club mascot, blinked his eyes in an apartment today to find his bed surrounded by Federal Department of Justice agents.

It was the end of the trail for Reilly, wanted on charges of harboring the outlaw fugitive in the twin cities more than two months ago. Without weapons, he offered no resistance as Federal operatives closed in. He was taken to an undisclosed destination and held incommunicado.

It was Reilly, reported to have been named recently in a secret indictment returned by a Federal grand jury, who guided Dillinger and his first lieutenant in crime, John Hamilton, to the home of Dr. N. G. Mortensen, then St. Paul city health commissioner, last spring.

There wounds of the two felons were examined by Mortensen and they departed. The wounds were believed to have been suffered either during the Sioux Falls, S. Dak., or Mason City, Iowa, bank robberies this spring.

Again it was Reilly, the Government contended, who laid the plans for the hideout at Mercer, Wis., which ended fatally for a Conservation Corps worker and a Federal investigator when the gang was surrounded by a raiding party. The principals escaped.

Operatives immediately began grilling him in an effort to elicit some clew to the whereabouts of Dillinger, who with three others of his erstwhile gang, now are the only ones at large.

Though Reilly had been at Little Bohemia, Dillinger hideout near Mercer, officers said he had left there shortly before the raid to take "Pat" Charrington, woman companion of the mob, to Minneapolis for medical attention.

Reilly also was supposed to have arranged a visit for Dillinger and others to a tourist camp near Winona, Minn., after the outlaw shot his way out of an apartment here March 31.

Big Companies Under U. S. Fire On Surplus Tax

Many Withheld Dividends to Evade Levy, Revenue Officials Charge.

(Copyright, 1934, by United Press.)

The Internal Revenue Bureau revealed yesterday to be in the midst of a campaign to tap new tax resources by levies on huge surpluses accumulated in recent years by several large corporations.

The bureau hopes to obtain large sums from corporations, including personal holding companies, which, in recent years, have permitted surpluses to accumulate instead of distributing profits in the form of taxable dividends.

Between 150 and 200 tax accounts are under scrutiny, the United Press was informed. The Treasury suspects that undistributed profits were permitted to accumulate for the purpose of avoiding taxation.

Names of the corporations are withheld by the bureau in accordance with its established custom. Their affairs, however, are being scrutinized by a special committee appointed several wteks ago by Commissioner of Revenue Guy T. Helvering.

Almost a score of minor cases already have been settled out of court, it was learned, though the actual cash return so far has been meager.

Police Seize Corliss Lamont, Son of Financier, as Picket

Jersey City, N. J., June 27 (AP).—The proletarian sympathies of Corliss W. Lamont, 32-year-old son of Thomas W. Lamont, partner of J. P. Morgan & Co., landed him in jail today as a disorderly person in the American Civil Liberties Union campaign for the right of peaceful picketing.

Dr. Lamont—A Harvard graduate, he has his Ph. D. from Columbia—was taken into custody by two policemen as he walked up and down in front of the Miller Parlor Furniture Co., Inc., 241 Orient avenue, carrying a sign.

He was taken to the eighth Precinct station in a radio patrol car, booked, and later arraigned before acting Judge Edward Markley and released on $1,500 bail for a hearing July 5.

It was announced Lamont will be represented at the July 5 hearing by John W. Davis, Democratic candidate for the Presidency in 1924.

Lamont, a member of the board of trustees of the Civil Liberties Union, volunteered with Alfred Bingham, son of former Senator Hiram Bingham of Connecticut, to aid the fight for peaceful picketing.

Bingham was arrested several days ago and will stand trial tomorrow with Arthur Garfield Hays as his counsel.

There is no strike at the Miller plant, but members of the Furniture Workers Industrial Union, a Communist-led left wing organization, have picketed the factory in an effort to have the workers walk out.

Hitler Balks Steel Helmet Disbandment

Orders Storm Troopers to Stop Attacks; Sees Von Papen.

Berlin, June 27 (AP).—Chancellor Hitler delivered a stinging rebuke to the radical elements of the Nazi regime today by rejecting flatly a demand for dissolution of the conservative steel helmet war veterans' organization.

Moreover, he ordered the storm troopers to cease their attacks, by word or deed, on the steel helmeters, whose leader, Franz Seldte, is minister of labor.

The action was taken by political circles as an indication that Hitler has thrown his lot with the conservative wing of the Nazi movement.

Confers With Von Papen.

Further indication of this was seen in the fact that he conferred at length this afternoon with Vice Chancellor Franz Von Papen, whose speech criticizing certain Nazi policies has sent radical leaders abroad on a vigorous nation-wide campaign throughout the nation.

Details of the talk with Von Papen were not revealed, but the report of Hitler's earlier meeting with Seldte minced no words in making it clear that the steel helmeters had won a hands-down victory.

The decision was the first Hitler was called upon to make since Von Papen's speech and it was forced by the radical elements themselves, through a demand that the other organization be dissolved.

Storm Troopers May Go.

Hitler's action again brought to the front reports that the storm troopers themselves may be slated for dissolution, or at least great reduction in numbers. During July they will be on a uniformless vacation, and many believe the interlude means the end of the organization which has played a major part in the Nazi government.

Bans against steel helmet meetings, such as one imposed by the state police in the Government District of Arnsberg presumably will be lifted as a result of the chancellor's stand.

Hitler met Seldte soon after he returned to the capital from his Bavarian mountain retreat where the chancellor always retires to think over important matters.

He listened to a detailed report of the controversy and then ruled that Germany needs the war veterans' organization, not only because of the proven worth of its members on the battlefield, but also as a balance wheel for the more impetuous younger men in the storm troopers.

Police Hold 3 Suspects In Hit-and-Run Fatality

Richmond, June 27 (Spl.).—Three arrests have been made following a hit-and-run accident which cost the life of Mrs. Roy L. Sexton, 24, of Suffolk, Saturday night, and injured five other occupants of the car, H. B. Nicholas, superintendent of State police, revealed today.

He said that the wreck was caused by a hit-and-run driver whose truck, loaded with lumber, sideswiped the machine in which Mrs. Sexton and the injured persons were riding.

Son, 3, Visits Mother Facing Execution in Slaying Tonight

She Anxiously Inquires of Jail Officials About Clemency.

Ossining, N. Y., June 27 (AP).—Mrs. Anna Antonio saw her 3-year-old son in the Sing Sing Prison death house today—for the last time unless executive clemency stays her execution tomorrow night.

Frank, youngest of three Antonio children, was brought here by his mother's brother, Peter Capello, of Schenectady, N. Y., and Mrs. Capello.

The same hopeful expectancy that for weeks had marked the demeanor of the 28-year-old woman, convicted of plotting her husband's slaying in Albany in 1933, was evident during the day.

"I am nervous, but I haven't gone to pieces," she told prison attendants. "I can't sew any more because the tension makes me too uneasy."

Then her thoughts, apparently, turned to her 80-year-old father, Fred Capello, sr., of Ossining, and her daughters, Phyllis, 9, and Marie, 6.

"The sight of my poor old father (whom she saw Sunday) kind of broke me down," she said. "I expect to see my two girls soon."

She spoke again of the persistent hope for clemency:

"Hasn't anything been heard about my situation? As soon as you get word, let me know.

"I won't believe everything is going to be so terrible, but I am going to make my will."

There still was no indication whether Gov. Herbert H. Lehman would act on behalf of Mrs. Antonio or Vincent Saetta and Sam Farraci, whom she allegedly promised $800 to stab and shoot her husband to death. They also are to die tomorrow night.

Norfolk Board Wants Hand in Army Base Bid

Seeks to Approve Deal Shipping Bureau May Make on Lessee.

Norfolk, Va., June 27.—The Norfolk City Council wants the privilege of investigating any proposed lessee of the Army base terminals, so that it "may take such action as it may deem necessary for the protection of its interests," before any bid for lease of the terminals is accepted by the United States Shipping Board Bureau. The bureau has called for bids for lease of the terminals, to be opened July 9.

In a resolution, the council pointed out that the interests of the city would transcend in importance any financial consideration so far as the Government was concerned.

At the same time the council was asked to adopt a resolution opposing the proposal of the Baltimore Mail Line that it be given a part of the whole of the overseas service now being performed by the Hampton Roads Line. Action was deferred until Tuesday in order that members might study the reslution.

Show Huge Revenue.

Specifications and statements prepared by the Shipping Board Bureau for the benefit of bidders for the Army Base lease disclosed yesterday that these terminals had produced a gross revenue of $3,104,583 for the calendar years 1928 up to May 31, 1934. The same report showed that for 1932 and 1933 and for January and February, 1934, there had been loaded an aggregate of 520,596 tons of freight, and 517,079 had been discharged.

The gross revenue for the terminals by years since 1928 was as follows: 1928, $508,260; 1929, $509,406; 1930, $517,501; 1931, $494,091; 1932, $476,468; 1933, $429,288; January 1 to May 31, 1934, $169,566.

Favor Present Operators.

The council resolution did not express any preference as between the several bidders but the present operators, Harvey Miller Interests, are known to be satisfactory to the city. A corporation known as the Virginia Piers, Inc., composed of Norfolk and Newport News shipping men with Saunders Wright as chairman, is endeavoring to obtain the lease. So is John T. Campbell, of the National Stevedoring & Shipping Co. The Virginia Piers, Inc., has obtained endorsements from several civic clubs.

W. Va. Apple Crop Decrease Is Seen

Yield of Only 60 Per Cent Is Expected.

Martinsburg, W. Va., June 27 (Spl.).—H. C. R. Stewart, State Federal crop estimator, Charleston, visiting this section Tuesday, said the State commercial apple crop will not be more than 60 per cent of last year's half crop.

Local estimates are above this, running in general to the belief that while there are fewer apples in eastern Panhandle counties this year, they are much cleaner and will pack out equally as large a tonnage of usable fruit.

Stewart notes that the western apple sections of the State are much shorter in commercial apples than the Panhandle, but also holds to his belief that the eastern counties' crop is so much shorter than last year's that it will not equal it by a considerable percentage. There are too many orchards that are almost entirely "blanks" this year, he says.

$12,000 Buried In Garden Stolen

Clarksburg, W. Va., June 27 Spl.).—Polish newspapers received here report that Alexander Tobias, 48, of Clarksburg, former employe of the Weirton Steel Co., lost $12,000 in currency when he buried it in his garden and it was dug up by thieves.

Tobias left two months ago, a comparatively rich man, to pass his declining years in his native village of Lubis, Poland. He took considerable currency with him as the result of 20 years of hard labor at the steel mill here and good local investments. When he arrived there he buried $12,000 between potato rows in a garden. There thieves found it.

Carroll Court Calls for Budget Statement.

Westminster, Md., June 27 (Spl.). Under the terms of an opinion filed by Chief Judge Francis Neal Parke in the Carrol County Circuit Court today, the county board of education is required to submit to the county commissioners a statement of the unexpended balances on hand or in the treasury.

Premature Fourth Celebration Ends in Blast; Boy Near Death

Disaster Meets Brothers' "Experiment" With Giant Cracker.

Seared from head to foot by flaming shellac, 7-year-old Joe Meagher, victim of a premature Fourth-of-July celebration, was reported near death in Emergency Hospital last night.

The youngster was burned in a terrific explosion yesterday as he conducted an "experiment" with his brother, Paul Meagher, Jr., 11, in the basement of their home, 2811 North Capitol street.

Earlier in th day, Paul had been playing near the Meagher home. In the street he found half of a giant firecracker, apparently discarded when it failed to explode. He took the "cracker" home, and with Joe decided to remove the powder and make "colored fire."

The boys chose the basement for their fun. Paul ripped the explosive open and poured its contents in an inch-square tin box. A piece of string was obtained for a fuse. One end wa buried in the powder and the other end was fired with a match.

Then the brothers stood back to await results. But nothing happened. Paul approached the tin box, lying on the cement floor. With the burned match, still hot, he scraped the powder into a heap, pulled out the "fuse" and dropped the warm match into the box.

When this, too, failed to produce the desired results, Paul decided on different tactics. From his father's work bench he procured a can of shellac. Joe drew nearer to watch the second "experiment." Paul poured several drops of shellac onto the powder. A deafening explosion resulted.

Joe, bending over the tiny tin box, was splattered with blazing fluid from the open shellac can.

Upstairs, Mrs. S. E. Linkins, the housekeeper, startled by the explosion, hurried to the cellar. Joe, screaming for help, lay on the floor.

Mrs. Linkins seized a heavy blanket and attempted to smother the youngster's blazing clothing. She was severely burned about the hand and arms.

Meanwhile, Paul ran upstairs, grabbed a large pan, and filling it with water, doused his brother's prostrate figure. Together, Paul and Mrs. Linkins carried Joe outdoors and summoned aid. The fire rescue squad, after rendering first aid, took the lad to the hospital.

Physicians said Joe suffered severe burns to the abdomen, back, legs, arms and head. His condition is critical.

Old Man Winter Hits Crab Crop, Sends Prices Up

Richmond, June 27 (Spl.).—Relief from the present high price of crab meat may not be expected before next spring, Richard Armstrong, State commissioner of fisheries, stated today.

The price of crabs has risen because of their scarcity, owing to the cold weather in the late winter, Mr. Armstrong said.

Nothing is as destructive to the crab supply as cold winter and it is seldom that there is full recovery under one or two years, according to Mr. Armstrong.

Mr. Armstrong declared that if next winter is mild, the crab supply will be well on the way to recovery by the end of next summer.

Owing to prices, Richmond restaurant men had to eliminate crab meat from moderate priced seafood plates.

Virginia Resort Trade Records Heavy Season

July and August Reports Indicate Increase Is Anticipated.

Richmond, June 27 (Spl.).—Indications point to a larger resort and tourist business for Virginia during July and August than in several years, according to the State Chamber of Commerce.

Attendance at beaches is far ahead of expectations, with a hotel at Virginia Beach being forced to turn away guests several week-ends and with an Old Point hotel doing a business far ahead of last season.

Attendance at conventions is greatly in advance of last year.

A great many persons from other States are coming to Virginia for fishing trips, and often remain several weeks. Shrines in many parts of the State, notably those near Charlottesville, also report an increased number of visitors.

Celebrations, which attract hordes of visitors from other sections of the country, are more numerous than in the past three years, it is reported.

Holdup Slaying Will Be Probed By Grand Jury

Phillips Gang Members May Be Indicted on Monday.

Richmond, June 27 (Spl.).—Hustings county grand jury, when it convenes Monday, will be asked to indict Robert Mais and William Davis, alleged members of the "Big George" Phillips gang, who were captured recently in Baltimore, for the holdup and ambush slaying of E. M. Huband, Federal Reserve truck driver, who was killed near the Broad Street Station last March.

Indictments have been prepared for presentation to the grand jury, it was learned today. The indictments also name Arthur Misenas, who is still at large, and George Kauffman and William Benjamin Phillips.

Kauffman and Phillips were slain recently when they attempted to escape from police.

Mais, who was wounded six times in a running fight with Baltimore police, is recovering at the City Jail Hospital in Baltimore. Davis, known as Walter Legenza, is in custody in Baltimore. Marie McKeever, who was captured with Mais and Davis, has been turned over to Federal authorities at Washington.

Mais and Davis will be brought here for questioning as soon as Mais is able to travel.

Two detectives from Washington came to Richmond today to confer with Capt. James R. Sheppard, director of public safety, and other authorities. The detetcives, it was reported, are probing recent activities of the "Big George" Phillips gang in Virginia, Maryland and Pennsylvania. Members of the gang are wanted in Washington for the holdup and shooting of a United States mail truck driver there last December. They also are accused of various crimes in Maryland, Pennsylvania, North Carolina and elsewhere.

Charleston, W. Va., June 27 (Spl.).—Direct State taxes ranging from 3 to 9 cents on each $100 worth of property have been imposed for the coming fiscal year by the State board of control.

Everybody will pay a tax of 1 cent into the State general fund. In addition there are levies for the retirement of State debts, chiefly money due the mother State of Virginia. Two cents on each $100 will be paid on tangible personal property used in agriculture, products of agriculturel and intangibles. Four cents will be paid on each $100 of residential property used by owners and on farms, and 8 cents will be collected on all other real and personal property.

Virginia Work Relief Plans Are Retarded

Short Hours and Lack of Skilled Men Hampers 1,000 Projects.

Richmond, June 27 (Spl.).—Restrictions on the number of hours a man may work and the lack of skilled workmen on the relief rolls are making it difficult to carry out the work relief program in Virginia, operated under the works division of the Virginia Emergency Relief Administration.

There are 1,000 approved projects throughout the State, that would employ about 30,000 persons and would absorb nearly all the men on relief in the State.

An unemployed man, certified for work relief, is permitted to work only 24 hours per week. He may work three 8 hour days or four 6 hour days.

These restrictions are making it very difficult for the authorities to use these men in conjunction with regular employes of the city, town or county.

Many of the approved projects are similar to the ones started and finished under the former CWA program.

There are now about 7,000 men and women working on work relief projects in Virginia.

Annapolis Academy 'Color Girl' Hits Friends in Annulment Plea

Virginia Classen Bronner Blames "Persuasion" for Marriage.

Baltimore, June 27 (Spl.).—Testifying today in Circuit Court in the suit of Mrs. Virginia Classen Thompson Bronner to have her marriage to John Brandon Bronner annulled, Mr. and Mrs. R. Howard Bland, jr., denied they had urged the young couple to get married last November.

In her petition for annulment, Mrs. Bronner, who was the Naval Academy's "color girl" last year, asserted certain mysterious "friends" had urged that she and Bronner elope to Ellicott City.

Yesterday Judge O'Dunne demanded that the "friends" be called to testify, and adjourned the case until they were called. Mr. and Mrs. Bland today said they were with young Bronner and his bride the day they were married.

They denied, however, they had especially urged that they be married, but admitted they had expressed approval of the match. They said they accompanied Bronner and Miss Thompson to Ellicott City and served as witnesses. The clergyman who married them, they agreed, advised the young couple against being married at that time, but had gone on with the ceremony when Bronner and the young woman insisted.

Potato Growers Appeal to U. S. To Buy Surplus

Congressmen Ask Hopkins to Give Product to Jobless.

Crisfield, Md., June 27 (Spl.).—With the price of cobbler potatoes going as low as $1 per barrel, lower Eastern Shore farmers are pleading for some relief in an effort to save their farms. The low market is said to be due to an overproduction in Maryland, Virginia and North Carolina.

Part of the anticipated surplus may be absorbed by the Federal Relief Administration, it was said, following a conference in Washington Monday between Harry L. Hopkins, Federal relief administrator, and Senator Millard E. Tydings (Democrat), Senator Phillips Lee Goldsborough (Republican) and Representative T. Alan Goldsborough (Democrat), all of Maryland, and Senator Harry F. Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, and Senator Bailey (Democrat), of North Carolina.

The conference urged the Federal Government to increase its purchases of potatoes for distribution to unemployed.

The FERA would undoubtedly buy some potatoes, Mr. Hopkins said, but he was unable to say what quantity would be taken.

Potato growers from Maryland, Virginia and North Carolina attended the conference. Others who took part in the conference included Gov. George C. Peery of Virginia and Dr. T. Symonds, representing the extension service, University of Maryland.

The Congressmen told Mr. Hopkins that it had been estimated that the surplus probably would be 7,000 carloads.

Mr. Hopkins also was informed that the price of potatoes had declined from about $2.25 a bushel to approximately $1.25, which is below the cost of production, which was placed around $1.75.

"Goodbye Bootleggers" Say Sinclair Dealers

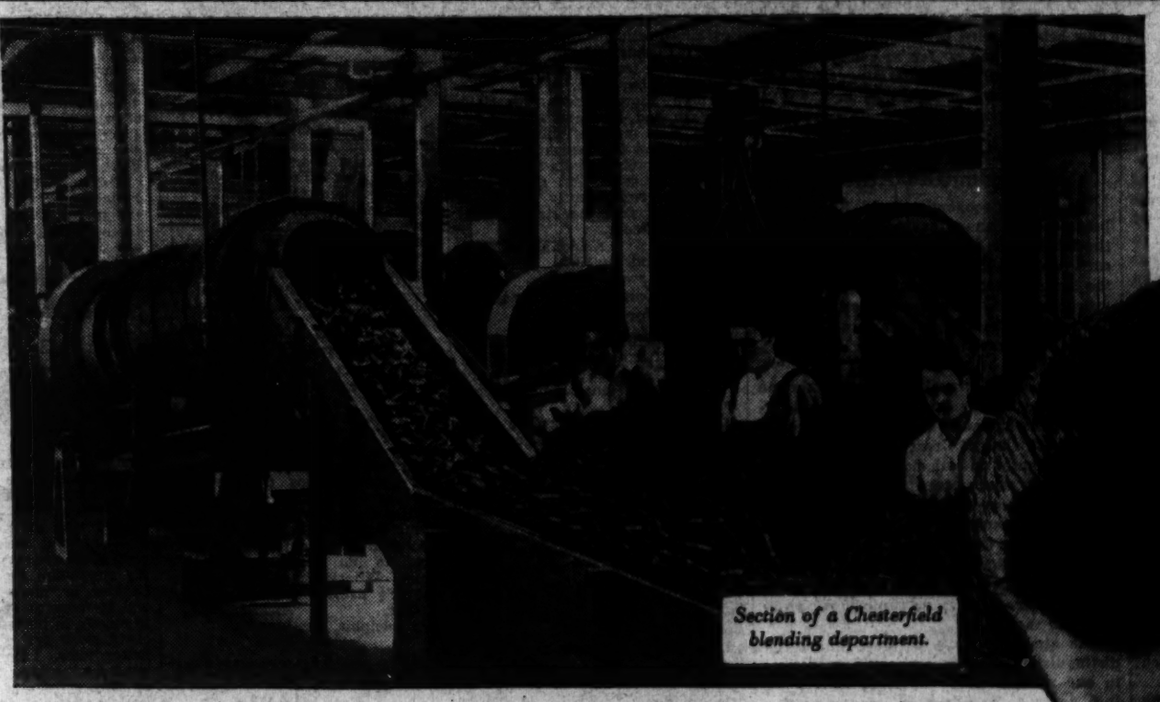
The American Automobile Association recently bought motor oil in 100 service stations in a large city and found this: In 40 cases the investigators were given a diluted of inferior oil. In 79 cases they got short measure. In 63 cases oil of the wrong grade was substituted.

The Association believes that on short measure alone, oil bootleggers steal $40,000,000 annually from the American public.

The conditions discovered by the Automobile Association do not exist when you stop at a Sinclair station. Here you will find Sinclair Motor Oils in Tamper-Proof cans. Each can is sealed at the refinery. Each can contains extra measure. Each can is clearly marked with the name and grade of the oil. And the cans are opened and destroyed before your very eyes. There is absolutely no chance for substitution.

Play safe. Stop at the nearest Sinclair station and ask for either Sinclair Opaline Motor Oil or Sinclair Pennsylvania Motor Oil.

—what it means



Section of a Chesterfield blending department.

—to blend and cross-blend mild ripe tobaccos

to "weld" them together

THERE are a great many different kinds of tobacco grown in this country and abroad. No two kinds are quite alike.

Every variety has a different taste and other different qualities all its own.

Some have more natural sweetness than others—some add a rare spice and a rich aroma—some burn more freely than others.

To get Chesterfield's milder better taste we take the right amounts of the right kinds of home-grown tobaccos, then add aromatic Turkish.

When these tobaccos are blended and cross-blended the Chesterfield way—balanced—each kind of tobacco helps to bring out the best smoking qualities of the others.

That's what blending and cross-blending means to Chesterfield—milder better taste. And that's why They Satisfy.

The Milk Decision.

An injunction restraining the Government from enforcing an AAA milk licensing agreement against six dealers in the Chicago area has been granted by Federal Judge John P. Barnes. The decision declares that the production of milk is not "interstate commerce," does not occur in the "current of interstate commerce," and does not "affect interstate commerce in the sense in which those clauses have heretofore been used."

Judge Barnes dismissed as irrevelant the contention that in order to control the distribution of milk within the Chicago area it is necessary to control all milk coming into that area, whether produced within or without the State of Illinois. He also refused to pass upon the general validity of the licensing section of the Agricultural Adjustment Act, or to express an opinion as to the constitutionality of the delegation of legislative power involved. His decision rested solely upon the opinion that the licensing agreement was an attempt to make milk distributors agencies through which the Government would be able to regulate the production of milk.

Provisions of the licensing agreement were cited to support this interpretation. Among these are the fixation of minimum prices at which producers might sell their milk, limitations upon output, and a system of charging which would force the milk producer to pay the costs of administration. As milk production is a purely intrastate business, Judge Barnes concludes that the Federal Government may not attempt to regulate by indirection a business which it can not regulate directly under the commerce clause.

Thus the decision, while not undertaking to pass judgment upon the larger constitutional questions involved, is none the less of great importance. For if it is sustained, it will circumvent efforts to force compulsory control upon those engaged in producing agricultural commodities that may subsequently enter the channels of interstate commerce.

Pocketing The Pocket Veto.

Since the days of Andrew Jackson the pocket veto has served as a convenient means whereby Presidents have permitted acts of Congress to expire without positive rejection. President Roosevelt has, therefore, set an important precedent by refusing to take advantage of this Constitutional prerogative. His decision to approve or reject all bills passed by Congress, and to express specific objections to vetoed measures, is admirable.

The veto power was given the President as a check against hasty and ill-advised legislation. Under ordinary circumstances this power is limited by the authority of Congress to pass a bill over the Executive's veto. But when Congress adjourns it can do nothing about withholding of the President's signature. He may then exercise absolute veto powers without even making known his attitude toward any measure. In other words, the President may allow important bills to go into discard simply by ignoring them. In view of the fact that Congress usually passes a great deal of vital legislation in the last days of a session, the pocket veto has become, in recent years, a very significant power.

In 1841 Henry Clay attempted to abolish the pocket veto, but his effort came to naught. Since then many significant bills have been quietly smothered by the White House. Prior to the Civil War it was customary for Presidents to make known their objections to bills that were disapproved, even though the pocket veto was used.

President Roosevelt now goes a step further by indicating that he will not use the pocket veto at all. Bills left on his desk after adjournment will either be signed or disapproved for specific reasons. This is a noteworthy contribution to candid and orderly administration.

Jungle Children.

Speaking before the recent meeting at Berkeley, Calif., of the American Society for the Advancement of Science, Dr. George M. Stratton, of the University of California, told some weird tales about children who had been adopted by wild animals and reared in jungle caves. Most of the instances were in European countries or in India.

Speech functions, he said, were affected. Most of these sad tots who had remained for long under beastly care crouched, or went on all fours, or scuttled on knees or elbows. When rescued they were averse to human companionship, remained apathetic toward human emotions, showed little compassion, tenderness, or joy. They were remarkably fleet in motion, and many were captured only with difficulty.

Most of these little children were captured by wolves in wild countries, taken to the lairs, ostensibly as food for the suckling young of the captors. But some instinct in the mother animal saved the captives from death. Upon their restoration to society they all hated humans and wanted to live with pets.

Such happenings are rare, the investigators report, but have happened often enough since the days of Romulus and Remus to allow psychiatrists to study the effects of complete animalism upon human children. The scarcity of such instances naturally keeps these jungle children from being a major problem, but a certain amount of wisdom, applicable otherwise, may be found in Dr. Stratton's conclusions:

"Such children must learn to be human," he said. "It seems that without social help we would all be human beasts."

After Twenty Years.

Across a world that seemed singularly secure and whose people were hardly conscious that they were about to witness the death struggles of a civilization, there sounded 20 years ago today the crack of bullets for which the war-lords of Europe had been waiting. And two decades after that awful moment, which saw the murder of the heir to the Austrian throne and his morganatic wife in sleepy Serajevo, the world is clearly nervous about another war. It wonders who may perhaps take the place of the fanatical youth whose sudden act unloosed the devastating thunderbolts of Mars.

Is it exaggeration to say that we expect another war? Or is it not more true that this very fear, so little apparent in 1914, will forestall the expected cataclysm? In 1914 they were few who really expected war. Here in the United States millions of people went about their business, trustingly sure that progress was certain and that life was very sweet. America was provincial, aloof, and Europe was none of our concern.

Today, as the world still tends the wounds inflicted by the schoolboy's pistol, we have become acutely conscious that America is a part of the world. The rest of it is our concern, and we watch the moves of other governments closely. In 1934 the man in the street is incomparably better educated in international problems than was the case in 1914. That is one great difference.

Another difference lies in the fact that the old system of opposing alliances in Europe has given way and that on its ruins has been built at least the beginnings of a cooperative system different in design and objective from anything which has preceded in world history. The passing everywhere of the ostrich-like concept of isolation; the advent of a machinery of peace which is, however frail, a practicable alternative to war—these are notable changes which indicate that the dangers of today, while grave, are at least more remediable than those of 20 years ago.

Add to these the fact that those who were boys in 1914 are men today, that the generation which really knew the war of the trenches is now acquiring command of National destiny, and the probability of repetition seems further lessened.

The world has moved, these 20 years. Today the confusion is greater, the lines of policy are looser, the purposes of governments are less well-defined. It is this very confusion which makes many feel that a repetition of disaster is impending. But from that clear detachment which human beings find so difficult to achieve, it may well be that present chaos signifies the painful birth of a new and better order. 1914 was system; 1934 is muddle. Yet as that system was leading straight to the precipice, so may this confusion be leading tortuously up from the abyss.

Doles And Visions.

People in various parts of the country are beginning to think seriously about the relief problem. Living conditions for millions of families have been improved, and of course that is all to the good. But there is a growing realization that much of this improvement is a result of enormous Federal expenditures—amounting to more than $2,000,000,000 in two years—all of which must be repaid by taxpayers.

Prof. Malcolm H. Bryan's articles, the second of which appears on the page opposite today, temperately reflect Southern anxieties as to the eventual effect of the relief program in that part of the country. Many other close observers have expressed apprehension as to where this program is leading. By spending $130,000,000 per month the FERA has set unique standards of relief. How are these standards going to be maintained? Even Administrator Hopkins admitted a few days ago that unemployment relief "has got to be handled on something more than an emergency basis."

At the present rate of expenditure funds available to the FERA will not last long. Congress will be asked to appropriate additional billions for haphazard distribution. It is time that the demoralizing effect of this dole system, as well as its cost, be given serious thought in Administration circles. But there does not seem to be much evidence of a constructive approach at FERA headquarters. Mr. Hopkins quite properly emphasizes the desirability of unemployment insurance and old-age pensions, but his mind then leaps over practical relief methods to contemplate the decentralization of industry.

Unfortunately this latter suggestion indicates that the FERA still regards relief as a field for haphazard experimentation. Mr. Hopkins intimates that this bold scheme to rebuild American industry will become an important objective of the Administration. But apparently he has not tried to harmonize this plan of decentralization with the tendency toward elimination of small industrial units under the NRA. Nor does the scheme to settle industrial workers in rural areas where they may grow part of their own food harmonize with the objectives of the AAA. In other words, Mr. Hopkins does not seem to have begun to think the problem through.

Concentration of industries in a few huge centers has undoubtedly given rise to many problems. Decentralization appears desirable. But that is a gigantic economic and social problem. Generations have been utilized in developing our existing industrial concentration. Many years will be required to modify it substantially, without disruption. Furthermore, the changes must come in response to economic needs and advantages, rather than by the fiat of the FERA. When Mr. Hopkins talks so glibly about industrial decentralization to take the place of his emergency relief policy, he only weakens public confidence in his grasp of the fundamental problems with which he is dealing.

The Path To Recovery.

Recovery from every depression, in the last two generations at least, has been signalized by a revival of investment banking activity. During the period of liquidation and retrenchment, capital accumulates. Then, at a certain point, funds seeking investment find a condition permitting their employment in investment which is constructive from the viewpoint of general economic welfare, including reemployment of labor, and consumption of goods.

The amendments to the Securities Act were passed by Congress in recognition of the fact that the original restrictions were too drastic to permit investment banking activity to function, thus threatening to retard recovery by throwing the whole burden of financing on the Government. The test by which thoughtful observers will judge the new National Securities Exchange Commission, now in process of appointment, will be its attitude toward stimulation of private enterprise, within the terms of the regulating act. The essentially negative duty of regulation has been much emphasized. The commission must realize from the outset that it has also the very positive duty of forwarding recovery.

To most students of economics the key to the situation lies in the revival of the financing of business through established channels. This means the placing of investment funds through banking machinery for the refunding of existing indebtedness, and for new issues of railroad and other corporate securities. On a sufficiently large scale, such issues may start the real upturn in the business situation which the country is so anxiously awaiting.

Railroad securities do not have to be registered. So in that field action can be taken with greater speed than with other corporate securities requiring registration and the long processes probable in obtaining the approval of the regulatory commission. In this connection there is reason to hope that some important railroad issues may be announced shortly, unless the Government decides to compete with private initiative in this field.

The beginning of these investment issues would be an encouraging sign, particularly if followed by a volume of increasing proportions. In that event there would be real prospect that normal business organization will begin to take up some of the burden now being carried by the Government. By this means—and so far as can be seen by this means only—will the staggering load on the Treasury be lightened in a way to promise real recovery and ultimate prosperity.

The Scientific Attitude.

The British economist, J. M. Keynes, has become such an enthusiastic supporter of the Administration's recovery program as to earn the right to high honorary place within the inner circle. He should be particularly welcome there, because as a foreigner, his opinions can be accepted as those of a detached, disinterested observer of the American scene.

It is certainly gratifying to American pride to be told by this well-known authority that the extent of our recovery, as compared with that of Great Britain, has been underestimated on both sides of the Atlantic. Mr. Keynes emphasizes that the gain in the numbers of employed since the beginning of 1933 has been much greater in the United States than in Great Britain. However, he has to admit that we started to rise from a much lower point, and that we still have a much more serious unemployment problem than the British.

The almost feverish interest which the distinguished British economist manifests in our welfare would be more convincing if it could be regarded as completely disinterested. But the fact is that Mr. Keynes welcomes the opportunity to see some of his most cherished theories put to the test of practice in the American political laboratory.

It would be a prime misfortune from his scientific viewpoint if we were to abandon experimental spending policies before their efficacy as an aid to recovery had been fully tested. So it is but natural that he should congratulate us on our splendid achievements to date, and suggest that additional spending stimulants will enable us to better the record.

It is to be feared that this exuberant confidence in our ability to outstrip the British in the race toward recovery is not pure philanthropic zeal on Mr. Keynes' part. Nor is it unkind to suggest that he yearns for an opportunity to prove to his skeptical fellow countrymen that he is a prophet with honor abroad. After all it is the glory of the scientific attitude to be somewhat indifferent to results. As in the case of the surgeon who claimed a most successful operation, even though the patient died.

Trasr-Filled Streets.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The streets around the new Agriculture Building, between Twelfth and Fourteenth on B and C southwest, are as dirty and trash-filled as those in the slums of other cities I have seen. At meal times the AAA clerks deposit their refuse on streets and parkings; residents mow their lawns and the grass, left in the streets, stays there for days blowing about with the other trash.

These thoroughfares, especially Twelfth and Fourteenth, have become main arteries into the city and the first impression to visitors from the South is really very bad.

It would seem that refuse cans should be conveniently placed for papers and that the streets could be swept oftener.

"Ten Commandments for World Peace."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In 1919—after a careful study of the "supposed" Versailles Peace Treaty I wrote these ten commandments for world peace.

1. The power to declare war should be taken from the President and Congress, and should only be exercised after a plebiscite by the people, those called upon to bring the supreme sacrifice and bear the burdens of war.

2. The power to declare conscription should likewise be taken from the President and Congress, and conscription only declared after a plebiscite by the peeople. Not only the youths of the land shall be conscripted, but the wealth, labor and all industries necessary to conduct the war.

3. Manufacture of all munitions and war materials should be under Government control and supervision with full publicity of sales. An embargo of all war materials and munitions to countries at war.

4. The United States should continue to have an Army and Navy sufficient to protect it from invasion as well as safeguard its colonies.

5. International treaties stripped of all camouflage should be published and broadcast throughout the land.

6. The Government should give fullest publicity, stating facts to prevent spreading false propaganda.

7. National, racial, religious hatreds and intolerance should be eliminated by honest and upright dealings with all nations.

8. Cease to glorify war and military heroism. There are many better ways to serve your country by setting an example for peace.

9. Peace and goodwill should be taught in the home to the youth in all lands, likewise international peace and brotherly love.

10. Educate the people of the world to the great advantages of propaganda for peace and make international peace a necessary and important branch of study in every school, college and university.

Credit to Hoover Regime.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It would seem that Dr. Tugwell was rather disingenuous at the meeting of the Congressional committee the other day. He is credited as saying that as far back as 1931 or 1932 he had thought that the Government could have done more to help the situation than it did. He neglected to say that every plan that Mr. Hoover offered was turned down by a Democratic Congress plus renegade Republicans in what seems now like planned action.

No one seems to recall that the RFC and the Home Loan Bank, the Better Homes, the Welfare, as well as tariff freedom for the President belong to the Hoover regime. No credit has been given for any of these by the present Administration. In this it has been much less generous than Mr. Hoover, who on several occasions has defended the President's actions.

Without questioning the sincerity of the President in most cases, he has certainly permitted his underlings to do some questionable things. Witness the removal of Mr. Hoover's name from the dam at Boulder. A. TEACHER.

College Degrees for Presidents

ACCOUNTS of the conferring of the LL. D. degree on President Roosevelt by Yale emphasize the fact that the only previous President to receive that degree from Yale in person was the other Roosevelt. As a matter of fact, the names of eight other Presidents figure in the university's honorary list, but most of them (Washington, John Adams, Thomas Jefferson, William H. Taft, Woodrow Wilson and Herbert Hoover) received the degree long before becoming President. Except for the Roosevelts, only Presidents Hayes and McKinley received it during their Presidential term.

It is probable that, if the full record were at hand, it would be found that virtually all of our 32 Chief Executives have been thus distinguished; if eminence in personal achievement happened to be lacking (as it unhappily did with numerous occupants of the White House), State pride and the numerous institutions of learning would have seen to it. But, says the New York Times, the other large universities share with Yale the record of having conferred honorary degrees on comparatively few Presidents in office. Princeton has nine or ten Presidential names on its list, but only three were thus distinguished during the official term. Harvard's list is, in number and eminence, perhaps the most striking of all; yet, of the eleven Presidential names which appear on Harvard's list, only five received the distinction during their official term.

* * * *

Washington became a Harvard doctor of laws in 1776, Jefferson in 1787, and John Quincy Adams, Taft Wilson and Hoover received their honorary diplomas years before their election to the Presidency. The college enumeration gives only Monroe, Jackson, Grant, Hayes and Theodore Roosevelt as recipients of Harvard's degree during their terms of office. One highly interesting fact in the record is that Abraham Lincoln, although in 1864 he became a Princeton LL. D., had already received that degree from Knox College before he was even nominated for the Presidency.

Harvard's conferring of the degree on Andrew Jackson in the very year (1833) when his campaign against the United States Bank was inflaming New England feeling became a political sensation of the day. Unluckily perhaps for the university, the occasion selected was what the opposition pamphleteers called Jackson's "triumphal progress" into "the enemy's country," with political ovations at all stopping-places on the way. "A sycophantic compliment" was the decription of the event at Cambridge by Jackson's censorious predecessor in the Presidency. But there is no reason to suppose that the Harvard ceremony lacked appropriate distinction. Even that bitter Federalist, Philip Hone, had confided to his diary, after attending Jackson's public reception at New York, the surprising judgment that, at any rate, this swashbuckler of partisan tradition was "a man of tact."

To Harvard also was reserved another unusual experience. In 1886, during Grover Cleveland's first term in the White House, Harvard extended to him its invitation to be present at the university's 250th anniversary and receive the LL. D. degree. He accepted the invitation to attend, but characteristically declined the degree, on the ground that neither as a lawyer nor as a writer did his personal achievement warrant the distinction.

Courtesy and Caution.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: When I told my folks I was coming to Washington, they said that they had heard the people in Washington were so "stuck up."

Maybe they are, but even if I did come from "way out West," I must be stuck up, too, for there are just thousands of people here that I don't care to speak to very much.

Anyway I will say they are courteous. I can get along without the good-fellow slap on the back, if people will just be kind when I ask them a question, and Washington people are that, which, of course, is real courtesy.

There is just one thing that bothers me, I do wish they wouldn't try to run over me from five different directions at Nineteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue. I would feel safer if a nice traffic policeman were there all the time.

'Chain Store Monopoly.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In the Chicago Herald Examiner of June 25, a story tells us that The Washington Post says Senator Borah threatens to do some barnstorming from Chicago sounding his alarms against monopoly and the breakdown of individualism.

The writer is a veteran of 29. I mingle with the rank and file—the majority that makes, by its purchasing power, good or bad times. My suggestion for a theme to the Senator is "chain store monopoly and its menace to individual right to remain in business." Correct the chain store evil and you will see better times. I am not a home man but I see the common man deprived of the safety to enter business against chains. A. C. WAYNE.

The Post Impressionist

The Climatic Climax.

Postoffice, Thursday.

WE strive to please—but it's a hard job. We live and learn—but the lessons are trying to our finer sensibilities. A fortnight ago, we indulged in the dangerous luxury of irony; we'll never do that again.

We published a letter signed "Old Washingtonian," wherein a frankly hypothetical correspondent complained against "the frequent articles which appears in The Washington Post inferentially criticizing the alleged heat of the District climate during certain Summer months." Our "Old Washingtonian" said that these criticisms were unjustified and were made only by "outsiders" who, he thought, had better stay away from Washington.

With labored humor and painful veracity, we stated that "Old Washingtonian" was a myth. But we forgot that the human eye sees only what it wants to see, and that what it most wants to see is whatever will most offend it. So a genuine correspondent rushed in to belabor the non-existent "Old Washingtonian" even as Baer did Carnera!

He dares us to publish his wrath. As a work of penance, we accept his challenge.

He says "this hick village is notorious the world over for its rotten, slimy, oozy Summer climate." He asks whether it is a "closed town" that any of its citizens should speak of "outsiders." His indignation plays havoc with his syntax. Attempting to picture the jungle that—so he avers—once was Washington, he loses his sentence-sequence in its trackless wastes:

"But for those same so-called "outsiders, Washington today would be just what it was when Old Washingtonian was a young native, one of the worst towns in the world—lightless, streetless, a dirty, malaria-infested swamp, so far behind in anything modern or civilized that, were it not for those same 'outsiders' who came here with money to spend, and did spend it, in building up and cleaning out this hole, although directly repelled by 'natives' who resented any . . . modernization, these so-called strangers came, battled with the worst kind of conditions and made Washington at least habitable for a part of the year."

Getting his breath after this excursion, the offended "outsider" continues:

"Only a half-baked salamander too lazy and inert to have any ambition or make any effort would ever consider this place fit to live in during Summer. I am a traveler who has taken many sea-trips, and many other trips, to various parts of the world, and know others who have done likewise, even many times around the world, and each and all agree that there is not a worse climate on the face of the earth than Washington.

"Outside of these shell-backed, moss-covered old Washingtonians . . . there is no grumbling. We come here with our money, spend it and go about our business . . . We are big enough and broad enough to overlook a clumsy slam at 'outsiders' . . . However, the weather articles are true, and you can't beat that, for the outsiders have nothing to do with making the weather, Old Washingtonian!

"I only wish I had your name and address. I would tell you more than I could write in a week, Lucky I don't know you, or it would be just too bad for Old Washingtonian."

This placed us neatly between the horns of an awkward dilemma. On the one hand, our columnar practice of nonresistence prohibits our answering the Carniverous-Baerish attack in kind. On the other hand, our loyalty to this city demands its defense.

Fortunately we showed the letter to our friend the Doctor. And the Doctor undertook a reply.

"Your anonymous correspondent," the Doctor dictated, "presents a pathological condition familiar to all local physicians. Nearly every outsider coming to Washington develops the same symptoms during his first Summer here. These symptoms are evidences of a painful, but necessary, process of acclimatization involving a general readjustment of certain cellular tissues, which in turn affects the nerves and frequently causes a profound derangement and osmotic disruption of lymph.

"The process is a part of nature's leveling oeconomy. When a human being passes into a climate strange to his system, nature immediately begins to adapt him thereto. When nature succeeds, he lives among the new conditions with some degree of tolerance. When nature fails, he must either emigrate or die.

"But during the period of adaptation," says our Doctor, "a certain amount of discomfort is inevitable, which sets up intense nervous irritability. Hence the frequent quarrels among exploring expeditions from the temperate zone into the regions of the Amazon or the Potomac. The patient's condition mounts to a perfectly familiar crisis, which either gradually subsides or proves quickly fatal. The crisis is marked by high temperature, increased blood-pressure and a resentment against non-sufferers. Any Washington physician will tell you that the patient is not accountable for his words.

"The present case presents no unfamiliar facts. I should prescribe here, as usual, a quieting diet, cessation of alcohol and tobacco, no heavier reading than your Column and, when the thermometer rises above 100, an occasional afternoon on the top of the Washington Monument. In small and cooling doses, sarsaparilla is of frequent benefit."

So, after all, we don't have to be ugly to our anonymous critic. We see that it would be unkind to answer him in kind. We simply pass him that prescription. And we hope he survives a crisis for which, we now frankly acknowledge, he is not responsible.

The Professional Problem.

Hark, hark, the dogs do bark,
"The professors are coming to town.
"Some in rags, some in tags,
"Some in velvet gowns."

BARGERON

The horde of professors that is advancing upon our town presents a problem to our social workers on which I am sure they will not fall down. Fourteen professors are en route to go to work for the Treasury and two others are known to be on the way for other Government enterprise. There must be countless other unreported ones.

We must face facts. What we are manifestly up against is something on the order of the former invasions of the wheat fields by college students. It used to be quite the thing for the students as soon as the colleges closed for the summer to hie themselves to the wheat fields, where they would get $3 and $4 and even more a day for cutting down the wheat. Now it is a case of their teachers coming here for the same purpose, the cutting down of wheat now being directed from Washington. They have stolen a march on the youngsters.

• • • •

Our problem is two-fold. Some of the professors coming here have jobs in advance. With them there is no problem of feeding and housing, unless in some few cases it may be necessary to make an advance in wages until the first pay day. This, however, I am sure, can be arranged by the machinery authorized in the Sheppard bill by which institutions loaning from $10 to $100, or maybe more, on character are to be encouraged.

The real problem with those professors having jobs in advance will not be financial, however. It will be in seeing that they meet the right people here, that in a big and wicked city, wholly new to them, they do not unwittingly fall into the ways of temptation and sin. We know by experience that many of the impressionable collegians going into the wild and woolly wheat fields were thrown with evil companions. This we must avoid in what might be called this second mass movement of the students.

• • • •

There is nothing to be gained by denying or temporizing with the fact that our midst is honeycombed, with sirens. It is no disloyalty to the Board of Trade to say this. What I think our social workers should do is to meet every train bringing in professors and see that they are lodged in the homes of good, substantial people. At nights the professors will, of course, want their recreation. We know that there are many good girls here who also want recreation. During the war our social workers realized the danger of men and women, away from home and longing for companionship, seeking acquaintance in public dance halls. Steps were therefore taken to bring them together under wholesome, chaperoned auspices. Ah, many a romance budded in those circumstances, romances which came to enrich our American life rather than break it down.

The breakdown that subsequently came was not attributable to these romances. The economists have charged everything else, but our Washington war romances have come through unscathed.

• • • •

The first thing in dealing with the professors who have no assurance of a job is to seek to discourage them from coming here. We should send word out to the country that while it appears that Mr. Roosevelt is prepared to give every professor in the country a job, this is actually not the case. He may be unable to support a lot of them.

This will not wholly check the invasion, of course. We will have any number of stranded professors on our hands. They must be fed and housed.

And another thing: Are the professors securing jobs to be required to send home allotments as were the workers during the war?

Roanoke's Airport Is Being Improved

Will Be Stopping Place on D. C.-Texas Route.

Roanoke, Va., June 27 (Spl.).—The municipal airport here will be ready for the first air-mail planes when the Washington-Texas service is started, City Manager W. P. Hunter says.

Work has been started on lengthening the runways, required by the Department of Commerce as a condition to making the airport a regular stopping point, and radio sending and receiving apparatus is being installed.

The city acquired 300 acres for the airport at a cost of $70,000.

Carpenters Spurn Work at Danville

Danville, Va., June 27 (Spl.).—The local Federal Reemployment Bureau today threatened to send out of town and import carpenters because of the few registrations for work on the new city bridge, where there is a demand for this class of worker. John Weber, manager of the bureau, said that great difficulty was being experienced. The rate paid for carpenters on the job, Weber said, is 40 cents an hour.

South and New Deal

Low Wages Have Prevailed for Years; Writer Explains Federal Problems.

(Malcolm H. Bryan, associate professor of economics at the University of Georgia, is a recognized authority on the social and industrial problems of the far South. The Post prints below the second of a series of five articles, prepared by Prof. Bryan at our request, in which the far-reaching effect of the New Deal on the economic structure of the Southern States is given impartial examination.)

By Malcolm H. Bryan.

IN trying to analyze in preceding articles some elements of Federal policy in the South with respect to the increase of wages, relief standards, the diminution of wage differentials between the North and the South and the contraction of agriculture, it has been observed that the existence of lower wages in the Southern States has heretofore been persistent over a long period.

It has been argued, in addition, that low wages in the area are for the most part an effect of fundamental conditioning limitations in the economic environment of the South.

From the basis of this approach, the thought has been advanced that the attempt to cure the South's wage difficulties by what thus far is scarcely more than the simple expedient of governmental fiat is a seriously questionable procedure. For, while it strikes directly at the South's wage problem by ordering wage rates increased, it is likely to throw up a resultant series of maladjustments which will themselves be undesirable and require prompt and effective treatment. Since all this is certain to be expensive, not alone to the South but to the North, a pretty solemn consideration of causes and effects is quite in place.

Low Wage Reasons In South Apparent.

IN general, the reasons for low wages and low incomes in the South are apparent, and customarily are ignored as they are obvious:

In the first place, the character of Southern soils is usually such that they have yielded, for most crops, a low ratio of output per unit of input. While in times past the better grades of Southern soils have given a fairly satisfactory monetary return, the use of a considerable proportion of the territory has been dependent upon low wages, on the one hand, and upon a semimonopoly price advantage for cotton on the other. The shift of the world market situation for cotton, creating a decisive lowering in the real price of this crop, plus the effect of the boll weevil, has in an important measure destroyed the outlet in which Southern soils have had their greatest comparative advantage.

In connection with soils—next to climate by all odds the South's greatest natural resource—it should be remarked that their texture and topography are such that they have been more largely affected by erosion than is generally true in other regions. Further than that and just as significant, the topography of most Southern soils does not lend itself to the mechanization of agricultural operations to the same degree as is true in many areas. The net upshot is, in the occupation in which most Southerners are necessarily engaged, agriculture, the per unit value productivity of labor is depressed.

Turning to labor itself, in the second place, it needs to be noticed that the Southern working population contains a large element which is, for whatever reason, less adapted to modern techniques of production. Thus again the real productivity per labor unit tends to be relatively less in the South than in some other parts of the country.

Economic Conditions Govern Labor.

IT should be remarked at this point that no disparaging attitude is here adopted as to the inherent qualities or eventual developmental capacities of either white or colored persons. The statement refers simply to an existing economic status in a given economic environment. The present writer's opinion, indeed, is that the bulk of Southern labor, granted training and the discipline of industrial experience, can become quite as effective as Northern labor.

We have too many examples of industrial establishments in which a Southern labor force is producing equal, and occasionally superior, results to believe otherwise. But training, both for labor and for management, is necessary, and adequate capital equipment is required. These are all expensive. During the time requisite for the South to catch up, then, Southern labor remains on the whole economically less efficient.

Many persons, of course, will suggest that low wages are due to the South's lagging appropriations for public health and education. This is unquestionably true in a measure; and it is an entirely satisfying explanation for those to whom the matter of low wages in the South is purely a moral question, preferably ascribed to some element of Southern iniquity. But it should be remembered in fairness that there is here a mutuality of relationship, as the South—for reasons in part herein outlined—has not possessed the economic resources needed to support the educational and health programs with which other sections have been easily able to endow themselves.

Southern taxes are usually low in amount, be it admitted. At the same time, in proportion to the South's wealth and income, they generally make a far better showing and represent a greater degree of sacrifice than most of the South's critics are often willing to admit. For instance, the writer's own State, Georgia, has been frequently taken to task for the smallness of its tax levies. Yet, if compared on the basis of estimated State income per capita, and the National average is used as 100, then Georgia has run over 114.

Trade Management Against South.

IN the third place, any differential in the effectiveness of business management is at present against the South. This is again no statement of developmental capacities; for, in lines in which the South has had sufficient experience, its managerial efficiency is well toward the top.

There are many types of economic enterprise, however, in which the South, either for reasons of recent development or constricted scope and opportunity, has not evolved a sufficient number of business managers of the highest grade. This argument need not be pushed especially far. To the extent of its existence, it has tended to lower the real productivity of Southern labor and to exercise a depressant influence on Southern wages, and will continue to do so until further experience and training remedy the situation.

Other cost factors, in the fourth place, have enforced low wages on the South in order that its products could be marketed at a competitive price. Most Southern industries are distant from large consuming centers, traffic density on Southern railroads is low, and the South, therefore, has suffered serious differential disadvantages in transport tolls. The South is a deficit capital area, and its economic endeavors have had to carry an extra burden of capital charges in most instances. The narrower market has, in many types of business, compelled larger overhead expenses per unit of production. And so on. The result has been that employment could not be offered Southern labor save at wage rates lower than in the North.

Old Tariff Issue Raises Its Head.

FINALLY, there is that old "local issue." National policy with respect to the tariff has exercised pressure on the world demand for the South's agricultural exports, on their demand price in consequence, and, on the contrary, has raised the prices of manufactured commodities which the South must consume. Nothing further is required under this heading.

Net realized income has been lowered in the South. During the course of decades, scores of millions which the South might have used to raise wages, the elevation of living standards and an adequate outfit of capital equipment have been drained away to industrial States. My readers will forgive me when I say that to the South this necessarily appears as an example of economic brigandage without warrant in conscience or economics.

So much for a brief and incomplete outline of factors causing relatively low wages in the South as measured against the North. The question remains. What may logically be expected of a Federal policy which can not hope quickly to ameliorate the fundamental factors of causation but which demands, none the less, that the South pay higher wages—wages pushed up, it must be recalled, by a higher percentage than elsewhere—and to accomplish the command immediately?

(A third article by Mr. Bryan will appear tomorrow.)

All Hail, Lactic Acid!

DR. BORIS SOKOLOFF comes out with a surprise—no surprise to leading physiologists, but astonishing to the layman—the all-embracing role played by lactic acid in the human body. In the pages of a little book called "Vitality" (Dutton, $2), he translates recondite research into terms we can understand, if not, perhaps, use. For the matter so far seems to be purely descriptive, not pragmatic. We are told what lactic acid does, but we are not told how we can increase its marvelous benefits. That may come later. The subject, developed only in recent years, is hardly ripe yet.

THEO. HALL

Dr. Sokoloff is a cancer specialist; has worked in the Rockefeller Institute, the Cancer Institute of Columbia University and the George Washington Medical School. Buttressed by a score of experimenting colleagues, he speaks with authority. If I pose one collateral objection later on, it is only a flat common-sensical objection based on one of the prime disputes of medicine.

• • • •

But let us hear what lactic acid does. First, by oxidizing, it provides energy for the body, being oxidized in turn from glycogen.

Lactic acid appears to be the direct food of the brain.

It is a general antiseptic for the body, being formed by the white cells out of glucose as a weapon against infection. Natural or artificial fever produces six or seven times the normal content of lactic acid in the blood—hence fever's recently discovered raison d'etre in combating disease.

After muscular activity, lactic acid overcomes fatigue during relaxation.

Lactic acid stimulates the sweat glands. When a body ages the muscles wither. Since the muscles produce lactic acid, the increasing lack of this causes the skin to dry up and wrinkle.

Finally, lactic acid acts as a deterrent (not cure) of cancer. It inhibits the growth of cancer cells.

• • • •

Dr. Sokoloff's book is one more example of what Aldous Huxley calls the principal concern of our era—the defense against old age. Broadly speaking, it shows that science, far from being a receptacle of absolute and eternal truth, tends to support the dominant human ideas of the period. (If you'd like to examine this notion further, see an excellent article by Erwin Schroedinger in the June Harpers, entitled, "Is Science a Fashion of the Times?")

But to the case in hand—witness Dr. Sokoloff's eloquence on the theme of our naturally inexhaustible vitality. Animals, he argues, never die natural deaths. Man dies only through depreciated vitality, occasioned by disease or autointoxication. Since both of these adversaries of the body are opposed by lactic acid, one infers that man lives by lactic acid and dies from its exhaustion.

• • • •

In mentioning auto-intoxication, Dr. Sokoloff makes a good deal of the old bugaboo of "the lazy colon." "Every thoughtful clinical worker," he writes, "who attempts to find the prime cause of organic ailments, becomes convinced that it lies chiefly in intestinal troubles." Cancer and mental disorders are but the latest ills laid at the door of constipation. "Who will deny," asks the doctor, "that auto-intoxication from the colon and large intestine leads to a general lowering of the organism's resistance?"

Well, Dr. Logan Clendening, for one. In "The Human Body," with characteristic vigor, he scorns the hobby of laying everything to this bugaboo. "Of course, the fact that the absorbtion of such material (skatol and indol) or any other material, except water, from the large bowel hardly occurs at all; that no matter how often or thoroughly the bowel is flushed out, there is always some of this poisonous-appearing material in it; that after all, the body has through long ages adapted itself so that such material in the bowel will do it no harm, is lost sight of in the mad ride of the hobby once it is mounted, he says.

I could wish that such straightforward objections might be answered before Dr. Sokoloff and a hundred others spread a mass phobia toward a natural function.

Further chapters in "Vitality" describe the effect of cancer upon Napoleon's career, and report the most recently known material on the control of cancer. Dr. Sokoloff, with this informative book, comes as the latest courier from the battle-front of science and life.

Powerful of frame and voice, he displays equal aplomb before "Hill" committees and dowagers. Rarely seen without denicotinized corn cob pipe.

Such a large proportion of those who have been pictured by Mr. Robles have asked for the originals that The Washington Post is saving all these drawings to honor the requests of any future members of "The National Gallery."

You Don't Need to Raze the Barn if a Cyclone Is Coming

By Robert Quillen

The drought in the wheat country isn't new.

The following comment was printed in this place last September. It is quoted now to remind you again of democracy's fatal habit of waiting until the horse is stolen to lock the stable door.

The Government is urging farmers to plant less wheat in order to raise the price. It offers a kind of bribe to win their cooperation. And as this is written, it is offering the Orient 35,000,000 bushels, at a figure below the world price, in order to reduce the quantity of wheat in this country.

The idea is to make wheat scarce, for scarcity is the only thing that will insure a high price.

Nature is helping the good work along; and if she continues her help for another year or two, somebody is going hungry.

Do you know how much wheat we have on hand? Neither does anybody else. Government experts say 385,000,000 bushels. But they take available production records and subtract available consumption records and assume that the difference is left on hand.

But they say most of that 385,000,000 bushels is held on farms. That may sound right to a Government expert, but not to people who know something about farming.

Wheat "left on the farm" is fed to stock or eaten by chickens, pigeons and rats, or spoiled by mold and weevils. Very little of it ever will be flour.

There isn't enough hard wheat in sight to feed America a year.

This year the wheat section suffered the greatest drought in a generation. Kansas, banner wheat producing State, harvested but a fifth of her normal crop.

Wheat land is hard and dry. Even a normal snowfall this winter can not store up enough moisture to produce a normal crop.

Wheat is a heavy drinker. It takes an average of 1,044 pounds of water to produce a pound of wheat. And another year of drought, plus a little more Government generosity, should make bread scarce enough to please everybody but the city poor.

Wine Business Meets Protest

Dealers Oppose Sales by ABC Stores in Virginia.

Roanoke, Va., June 27 (Spl.).—A concerted protest against handling of wines by the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board is to be made by wholesalers and retailers of wines in the State, it is learned here, on grounds that the board is entering into direct competition with them through its liquor stores.

Henry L. Merrick, of the Royal Distributing Co., says the board is being asked to fix a date for hearing complaints. He says one of the suggestions the complainants are making is that the board "get out of the wine business or else change the whole set-up" so that dealers can make a profit.

"Red tape" involved in the board's regulations, it is claimed, prevented wine dealers from making deliveries until about two weeks after an order is received. It is claimed also that the retail price of some wines at the ABC stores is less than the price which wholesale concern must charge to make a profit.

New Pastor Arrives In St. Marys County

Leonardtown, Md., June 27 (Spl.).—The Rev. Paul Sampson has arrived in St. Marys County to take over three charges of the Methodist Episcopal Church circuit of this county. They are Cedar Point, Ebenezer and St. Georges.

He is a graduate of the American University and former pastor of Methodist Episcopal Church at Cabin John. The Rev. Louis Young, who has served as pastor for these same charges for the past four years, has been sent to South River circuit.

Hospital Cuts Expenses.

Waynesboro, Pa., June 27 (Spl.).—Operating expenses of the Waynesboro Hospital for the year just ending were $6,000 less than the previous fiscal year, the board of managers announced today in an annual statement. The current operating expenses are $35,645, while for the corresponding period last year they were $41,812. The hospital operated at a loss of $17,122, which was made up in State appropriations, Community Chest and income from the endowment fund.

60 at Danville Seek Cemetery Sexton Job

Danville, Va., June 27 (Spl.).—Sixty candidates will know before the end of this week who has been selected sexton of cemeteries.

The post became vacant in May through the death of J. E. Haraway.

The job pays $2,200 and supplies a home for the sexton. The vacancy brought a full crop of candidates. The sexton will be appointed by the public works committee.

Daily Talk About Books and Authors

The Poet Herrick.

Robert Herrick died in 1674 and the first biography appeared in 1910. He published his first volume of poems in 1648 and the second edition appeared in 1823.

Swinburne called him the greatest song writer in the English language; and it is certain that his best lyrics are immortal. He was a country clergyman in Devonshire, where he wrote most of his poems; he was expelled from the position by the Puritans, came up to London; and I suppose the reason why his poems attracted no attention was because he published them during the great Civil War, one year before the execution of King Charles the First, when men's minds were on politics and fighting.

His lovely, spontaneous verse found little favor during the eighteenth century, when highly polished and more artificial poems were in vogue; but the nineteenth century brought Herrick back from oblivion.

The latest biography of him was published a few weeks ago. It is called "Youth Immortal," is written by Emily Easton, and has a bibliography and some interesting pictures. She believes thoroughly in his religious sincerity and discusses his religious poems as well as the others, although his reputation depends on the secular lyrics which he collected in his volume called "Hesperides." The whole volume contains more than 1,200 short poems, and no one can tell in what order they were written, though Miss Easton makes conjectures. There is no more delightful book of verse.

Herrick is a complete enigma. Very few poets have prattled so much about their lives and likes and dislikes; he has no reserve. He is both confidential and garrulous. Yet nobody knows what he really thought.

He has been called an earnest Christian and an absolute Pagan; he talks constantly in his verse about women, and nobody knows whether these were real girls or creatures of his imagination. No one has ever written more charmingly about rural beauty, and yet there is some reason to believe that he hated the country.

All we really know is that he was a lyrical poet, and lyrics express not character, but moods. And every man in the world has moods that vary all the way from holiness to its opposite.

I advise all Americans to go to the place where he lived and wrote and where he is buried, though no one knows the location of the tomb. The place is Dean Prior, in Devonshire. The church where he preached is standing and so is the house where he lived. His poems will mean more to the reader after one has seen the surroundings he so accurately described.

I got permission from the vicar's wife to consult the parish register. I wandered around on my hands and knees in the chancel, found an old box that had not been opened for many years; the rusty wards shrieked as I turned the enormous key; I took out an ancient volume and there in ink yellow with age I found the inscription:

Robert Herrick the Vicar buried October 15, 1674.

The best comment on his work is by Thomas Bailey Aldrich:

What mighty epics have been wrecked by time
Since Herrick launched his cockleshells of rhyme!

Prince Georges To Get Murder Suspect Friday

Extradition Is Waived by James Orlando; Three D. C. Men Wanted.

James Orlando, held by Philadelphia police for murder in connection with the Bladensburg tea house shooting, has waived extradition and will be returned tomorrow to Prince Georges County, it was announced yesterday at Upper Marlboro.

The report was made by Sheriff W. Curtis Hopkins on his return from Harrisburg, Pa., where he attended extradition hearings, presided over by Lee Edwards, assistant attorney general of Pennsylvania.

Hopkins declared that James Wallace, who is serving an 18-year sentence for second degree murder in connection with the shooting and who accompanied the Maryland authorities to Harrisburg, identified Orlando from a picture as one who participated in the affray.

Three Suspects Wanted.

Papers were also received yesterday at Sheriff Hopkins' office, signed by Gov. Albert C. Ritchie, asking the extradition from the District of Columbia of the three colored men wanted in connection with the murder of John T. Geary, of Priests Bridge, Md.

The men, James Gross, who is said to have admitted firing the shot; Gordon Dent, and Donald Parker, all of Washington, are scheduled to face an extradition hearing before Judge George Mattingly in the municipal court here July 17. County authorities, however, expect the extradition to be completed before then.

It was also reported at Upper Marlboro that the grand jury would doubtless be recalled within a week to hear State's evidence in at least five murder cases. The short term of the circuit court is now in session.

D'Alexandro Case Up.

Besides Orlando and the three colored men, who are also alleged to have terrorized the county recently, the cases to be heard will include that of Joseph D'Alexandro, D'Alexandro, also charged with murder in connection with the tea house shooting, was recently returned from New York.

The docket will include, it is expected, the cases of Horace Wood and Houston Greenway, of Upper Marlboro, held in the county jail for the holdup of Mr. and Mrs. William P. Mumpford, of Camp Springs, Md. Mumpford was seriously assaulted during the holdup.

Leo Jackson, 21, who allegedly killed his father, James Edward Jackson, 65, during a quarrel recently at the Capitol Heights home, will also be brought before the grand jury if it reconvenes.

Divorce Bribery Case Continuance Granted

A continuance of bribery charges against William J. Nolan, local automobile dealer, and his branch manager, Francis H. Kearney, was granted by Judge John P. McMahon in Police Court yesterday. Trial was set for July 5.

They are accused of bribing two witnesses in divorce proceedings between Nolan and his wife. The men were arrested Tuesday following an investigation by the District attorney's office and released under bonds of $3,000 each.

Radio Waves and Ripples

IT seemed definitely settled last week that what the American radio public wants is something light, something funny, something simple, something pseudo-dramatic in the way of entertainment. A well-advertised and widely circulated fan magazine had announced the results of another star poll, and the Penners, the Crosbys, the Myrt and Marges, the Amos and Andys were reelected. And long lines of customers outside the Fox theater waiting to see Joe, the duck man, certainly would have justified averaging radio tastes thus.

But stay! N. B. C. had not yet been heard from; N. B. C., which according to its own press managers, has spent the winter "quietly conducting a thorough investigation of audience preferences in music;" N. B. C., whose sales staffs at its own "and affiliated stations in New York, Chicago, San Francisco, Boston, Pittsburgh, Cleveland and other large cities throughout the country have interviewed thousands of people in all walks of life, studied audience mail;" N. B. C., whose vice president, John F. Royal, toured 31 cities in 22 States obtaining frank opinions on this subject from station executives, business men, club women, office workers and representative people in many lines of activity; N. B. C., who yesterday announced:

"The steady development of a taste by radio audiences for more substantial and cultured types of music finds recognition . . . plans are being made to put on the air, beginning in October, four one-hour programs each week of the finest intimate concert compositions."

And again:

"The finest available soloists, trios, quartets and octets are now being engaged to perform chamber music, lieder and art songs and other notable compositions by classical and modern masters which previously have not found a place in radio programs."

This, of course, proves nothing, rather conclusively. Our Aunt Sadie, for instance, would rather you cut off her right arm than deprive her of the Philadelphia Symphony, &c. But try to talk her out of listening to Joe Penner Sunday evenings, and you have a real fight.

In five minutes five speakers will be heard, after introductions, from WMAL this afternoon, setting some kind of a record for brevity and a very good example for speechmakers.

The speakers: Wallace Robinson, chairman of the Board of Trade traffic committee; Melvin C. Hazen, District Commissioner; Robert V. Fleming, president of the Board of Trade, and Judge Gus Schuldt, of the Police Traffic Court.

Subject: Washington traffic. Oh, well.

Hairbreadth Harry:

"Nearly every radio artist makes a hobby of collecting . . . Harry Richman is no exception to the rule . . . For years, in this country and in Europe, he has sought out rare, antique firearms . . . Richman also collects rare ivory works of art. He owns hundreds of white elephants. He also collects walking sticks and fishing poles and leather-bound first editions."

&c., &c., &c.

Ripples . . .

Chief Wichasha Tankala is none other than your banjo playing Eddie Peabody . . . That's what the Sioux called him when the tribe put him on its honorary chief list . . . William S. Hart and Calvin Coolidge are the other names on the list . . . the only time Nick Lucas had occasion to use that spare guitar he has been carrying all these years, it broke a string, too . . . during a George Jessel Variety Hour broadcast . . . Nick grabbed an instrument from a startled Freddie Rich, guitarist, and missed nary a note . . . someone strung guitar No. 1 during the solo interlude . . . Freddie struck up the band . . . Nick struck up the guitar . . . the string broke again . . . Bill Huggins, who came to C. B. S. from Roanoke via Washington, was dubbed "Lazy" the day one of the bosses found him sitting on a high stool before the microphone . . . everyone else was standing . . . you've heard her sing deep down and vibrant—C. B. S. Show Boat . . . you've seen her pictures, large, lustrous eyes, &c.—Waves and Ripples . . . you'll find her at Lowe's Fox tomorrow—Gertrude Niesen.

Miss Patton, Lt. Waters Are Married

Military Wedding Rites Held at Beverly Farms, Mass.

Daughter of Fort Myer Army Officer Bride of Cavalryman.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

There is something about a small church that is most appealing. It actually seems to smile down upon the services, especially the weddings, that take place beneath its roof.

Yesterday afternoon little St. John's Church in Beverly Farms, Mass., was the scene of a military wedding of much interest to Washington society and Army circles all over the country. It was that of Miss Beatrice Ayer Patton, attractive daughter of Lieut. Col. and Mrs. George Smith Patton, jr., of Fort Myer, Va., and South Hamilton, Mass., and Lieut. John Knight Waters, U. S. A., son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Arnold E. Waters, of Baltimore.

The little church was decorated with white blossoms and ferns. The ceremony was performed at 3:30 o'clock by the Rev. Nelson Poe Carey, rector of the church, assisted by the Rev. Robert Patton, cousin of the bride.

As the afternoon sunshine filtered in through the stained glass windows, the ushers, Lieut. Fletcher Cole, Lieut. Frederick Warren, Lieut. William Fuller, and Capt. Frederick Kimball, resplendent in their full dress Army "blues," and Mr. Frederick Ayer, jr., cousin of the bride, came slowly up the aisle to the strains of the bridal chorus from Lohengrin, sung by a choir.

The four bridesmaids followed the ushers. They were Miss Mary Henry, daughter of Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Guy V. Henry, of Fort Knox, Ky.; Miss Rosemary Merrill, Miss Jean Gordon and Miss Anne Ayer, cousins of the bride. They wore frocks of ecru net made with straight tucked fronts, full-shirred shirts and shirred berthas. With these they wore brown bergere hats and brown sandals, and carried sheaves of African daisies.

Bride's Attendants.

The junior bridesmaids and the pages were George Patton 4th, brother of the bride, and her cousins, Hilda Ayer, Neil Ayer, Gene Merrill, Ethan Ayer and Keith Merrill. The girls wore dainty little frocks and hats of peach-colored organdie and the boys attired in cream-colored suits.

The last of the bridal attendants to go up the aisle was the maid of honor, Miss Ruth Ellen Patton, sister of the bride. Her frock, made on the same lines as those of the bridesmaids, was of apricot net trimmed with bows of apricot and gold ribbons. She also wore a brown bergere hat and brown slippers and carried an armful of African daisies.

The bride was escorted by her father to the altar, where they were met by the bridegroom and the best man, Mr. Levin Waters, brother of the bridegroom. The bride's wedding costume had been worn by her mother at her wedding, before that it was the wedding gown of the bride's grandmother. It was of old silk embroidery and white satin. Her veil of white tulle was simply arranged in cap fashion and held in place by orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of mixed white flowers.

Arch of Swords.

Upon leaving the church, after the ceremony, the bride and bridegroom passed beneath the traditional arch of sabers. There was a reception in the spacious garden of Green Meadows, the summer home of the bride's parents near South Hamilton. Following another old Army custom, the bride cut the wedding cake with her husband's saber. Mrs. Patton wore an empire model gown of heather gray chiffon and lace and a large black horsehair hat.

The bride, since her graduation from the Foxcroft School in Virginia, has made her home with her parents, first in Washington, and then at Fort Myer, when the change of station was made. She is an accomplished horsewoman and was a familiar figure on the bridle paths along the Potomac.

Lieut. Waters received his early education in Lutherville, Md., and in Baltimore. He was graduated from West Point with the class of 1931. While stationed at Fort Myer with the Third Cavalry, Lieut. Waters was an aid at the White House.

Early in the autumn, Lieut. Waters and his bride will go to Fort Riley, Kans., where the bridegroom will be a student in the Cavalry School.

Cabinet Wife Leaves on Trip Into Mexico

Mrs. Ickes to Attend Ninth Seminar on Latin America.

Mrs. Harold L. Ickes, wife of the Secretary of the Interior, left yesterday for a trip to Mexico. She will remain in that country about a month. Mrs. Ickes will visit Mexico City and will spend a week in Cuernavaca attending the ninth seminar on cultural relations with Latin America.

Sessions will be held in both Mexico City and Cuernavaca, but Mrs. Ickes has chosen to take part in the program held in the latter town, once a favorite residence of Cortes and Maximilian, which is now favored as a health resort by those who can not stand the high altitude of Mexico City. Nearby are the ruins of an Aztec temple which will interest Mrs. Ickes, who spent much time last summer studying ancient Indian civilization in the Southwest.

Mrs. Ickes will return to Washington the end of next month and in August will visit New Mexico, where she spent much of last summer working on her book, "Mesa Land."

Miss Rosa H. Colon, of Cayey, Puerto Rico; Mrs. Mandin Boter, of Bucharest, Rumania, and Miss Blanca Bermudo, of Madrid, Spain, are at the Dodge Hotel for several days. They were sent to the United States by their respective countries to study public health nursing.

Mrs. E. H. G. Slater has closed her home on Eighteenth street and has gone to Newport, R. I., for the summer.

State Songs Get Varied Congressional Reactions

Some of the Representatives and Senators Burst Loyally Into Melody at the Federation of Women's Clubs' Official List.

In Washington where the words "back home" are heard on every hand, State patriotism runs high. And what is patriotism without song? The following is the first of a series of three articles telling how members of Congress regard their official State songs.

By Mary Greiner Kelly.

A GOOD State song is one a Congressman will unconsciously sing on his way home. If he doesn't, there's something wrong with either the Congressman or the song. Sectional poet laureates as well as politicians should look into the matter.

Drenched with a constant downpour of district woes during his term at the Capitol, the Congressman learns something about the stuff good State songs are made of. The test is this: Does he find himself humming its strains each time he tries to iron the wrinkles out of his home State problems? Does he automatically incorporate its stirring passages in his speeches from the floor? No? Well, then the song hasn't what it takes.

Federation Makes List.

The General Federation of Women's Clubs recently compiled a list of official State songs. Where none existed, they wrote songs they thought appropriate. These were vigorously rehearsed recently at the national council meeting at Hot Springs. Confronted with the list, Congressmen and Congresswomen wrinkled their brows. Some hadn't even heard the songs before. Others proved the songs' authentically by bursting forth into words and melody.

There was Senator Hattie Caraway of Arkansas, for instance. She not only recognized the song presented to her but could sing every word of it The chorus went like this:

"Arkansas, Arkansas, 'tis a name dear.
'Tis the place I call 'Home Sweet Home.'
Arkansas, Arkansas, I salute thee,
From thy shelter no more I'll roam."

"Of course," said the only woman Senator, "I'd like to have a song about Arkansas bring in a few of our natural assets. One always thinks of the beautiful Ozark Mountains in connection with Arkansas. They really should be mentioned.

"On the other hand, the song has splendid rhythm. Arkansas folk, like most Southerners, are great lovers of rhythm, so the song is generally popular throughout the State."

"Ridiculous. I never heard it, and no one else ever did!" Thus did Representative Allen Goldsborough, of Maryland, greet the song the federation credited to his State. It was something about:

"A woman's heart, a woman's hand,
a woman's constancy,
In union strong, O Maryland, we pledge to right and thee."

"Why, Just Compare——"

"There is only one song about my State. That's "Maryland, My Maryland," he declared with feeling. "It's by far the most beautiful patriotic song ever written. Why, just compare these glorious words with those just mentioned." And, clearing his throat, he chanted the following in a pleasing voice:

"Remember Carroll's sacred trust,
Remember Howard's war-like thrust,
And all thy slumbers with the just,
Maryland, My Maryland."

"There," said Congressman Goldsborough, "are words that mean something. They're distinctive, thrilling. They take one back to the historic beginnings of the State, and make its citizens proud to be a part of it. They carry the spirit all State songs should possess."

"Massachusetts," said Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, "has no official State song, although 'Massachusetts, Old Bay State,' has been generally accepted by most musical organizations there."

This is the song contained on the Federation list. Like Mr. Goldsborough's favorite, it is historic in character. Words from a verse go:

"Massachusetts, old Bay State,
To thee this song we raise;
Where Pilgrim Fathers sought a shrine
In peace their God to praise."

"You see it carries a fine sentiment," added Mrs. Rogers, "and properly brings out the historical antiquity of the State. In a commonwealth so full of historical lore, any State song would be woefully lacking in gratitude without reference to its patriots.

Hard of Hearing Congress to Close With Banquet Tonight.

A TWO-YEAR campaign along the lines of government and social reform was launched by the National League of Women Voters yesterday through its board of directors who are in session here.

Fatigue Inventories Possible With Special Symptom Chart

WHAT is your fatigue rating? There are now as many ways of taking a fatigue inventory as of making a personality check-up, according to Prof. Donald A. Laird, head of the department of psychology at Colgate University.

Professor Laird, an authority on personality problems, has prepared a list of 55 questions by means of which one can determine the approach of fatigue, and whether or not enough rest is being obtained.

One symptom of fatigue listed by Professor Laird is spells of perspiration without muscular exertion to explain it. Another is disturbance of taste so that food, candy or tobacco seem flat and tasteless.

Trouble with remembering things just read or just spoken by some one else is another fatigue symptom, as is the unaccountable forgetting of engagements, telephone calls and the like. Wanting to change from one job to another before the first job is finished is a similar indication.

Strange and peculiar ideas flitting through one's mind are in the same category. Noises or buzzing in the head, itchiness or a creeping sensation of the skin, blurring or mistiness of objects before one's eyes, slight difficulties in hearing what is said to one; all are sensory symptoms of a fatigued condition.

Bad temper, irritability, a desire or tendency to swear and a feeling of needing sympathy are listed as similar symptoms in the mental sphere.

PILLAR to POST

Pretty, Homesick One.

BETTY NICHOLS, once acclaimed the prettiest girl in Western High School, vied with Naomi in the shedding of tears upon leaving Washington with her family to live in New York. Letters later received by her sorority sisters in Sigma Lamda revealed that she suffered from acute homesickness.

• • • •

Several young men managed to get to New York, hoping to relieve the beauteous Betty's ailment, notably "Chic" Thompson and Charles Blakely, the latter ostensibly on a visit to greet his father, captain of the Lexington, which led our naval forces in the recent review of the fleet in New York Harbor.

• • • •

Dick Lee, who was lucky enough to have his family also remove to New York, is doing his best to console her, and a host of swains Betty left behind her are gnashing their teeth.

Desperate Drags.

MISS VERA BLOOM does not smoke cigarettes for two reasons; first, because her father, Representative Sol Bloom, dislikes to see a woman smoke; second, because she has a lovely singing voice she wishes to preserve. It is with both pity and amusement she observes her friends in the toils of the cigarette habit, finding diplomatic dinners a sore trial. It is traditional that women do not smoke at such affairs.

• • • •

She told of seeing one of her friends in the dressing room of an embassy taking desperate drags at a cigarette before joining the dinner party in the drawing room.

"This will have to last me 45 minutes," she wailed.

• • • •

Although Mrs. Roosevelt has been known to smoke an occasional cigarette, it is still de trop for women to smoke in the White House. One woman, it is said, fainted from the privation.

Wedding Indiscretions.

THERE was an impish gleam in the eyes of Royellen Crampton, 5 years old, who was a flower girl at her sister Doris' wedding to Leckie Cox. Although she looked angelic in her old-fashioned apple-green, embroidered organdy the family held their breath wondering what atrocity Royellen might commit during the ceremony. But she surprised them by not upsetting the dignity of the occasion despite that impish look.

• • • •

Somebody's little cousin did upset the dignity of Berezoski-Kendall wedding not long ago. As David Aitchison, best man, reached to take the wedding ring from the white satin pillow to hand it to the groom, a little girl cried out indignantly: "David, you can't have that ring."

The Mahins Get About.

MRS. FRANK W. MAHIN refuses to sit by the fireside with her hands in her lap even though she celebrated her golden wedding more than five years ago. It is not unusual for her to have three and four engagements in a day, and she hurries from one to the other with a keen zest for society. Her favorite diversion is contract, and she plays an exceptionally good game. Her husband is equally active and to see them dancing together is a pretty picture.

• • • •

The last Congress passed a bill permitting Mr. Mahin to accept a decoration from Queen Wilhelmina of Holland making him an Officer of the Cross, of the Royal Order of Orange Nassau. The Mahins were in Europe during the war. With one son seeing action in France and a son-in-law in Egypt, they had plenty to worry them. The only thing saved from one ship that was blown up in the North Sea by the Germans was the Mahins' trunk filled with rare old lace. That lace can be seen now, I understand, here in the National Museum.

ALL HONEYMOON TRAILS led to Niagara Falls in the 90's. Newlyweds then, as now, traveled hundreds of miles to glimpse the seething spill of the world's greatest cataract. "Perhaps the waters' tremendous plunge reminds them of the plunge they have just taken," says one who believes Niagara is still a lodestone to honeymooners.

Canada, Europe, South America Popular Marriage-Trips Spots

Former Niagaran Takes Up Cudgels for the Falls, Where, He Says, Honeymooners Still Flock in Profusion to Gaze Open-Mouthed at Their Glory.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

IN the 80's and 90's a wedding was not a wedding, in the highest sense of the word, unless it was supplemented by a trip to Niagara Falls, the honeymooners' paradise.

A marriage having in the offing a journey to the world's greatest cataract was not only off to a good start, but it provided something for the principals to talk about until they reached their chimney corner days and centered their thoughts around their grandchildren.

But what of Niagara Falls now as the goal for modern newlyweds? Has it been relegated into the same category as "Just Married" signs, showers of rice, and the old shoes that formerly spun after departing brides and grooms? If so, what is now "the only thing" for newlyweds?

Honeymoons Are Anywhere.

Apparently, while many persons have discovered one doesn't have to be a bride or groom to appreciate Niagara, those whose nuptial knot has just been tied have decided a honeymoon is a honeymoon wherever it is spent. Consequently, many have focused their attention on other beauty spots of the world.

"Most of those who discuss wedding trips with me prefer Bermuda to Niagara Falls," said Capt. V. E. Sutton-Mattocks of a Washington Travel Bureau. "The slow tempo and these islands attracts brides and grooms. For while there is plenty to do and see in Bermuda, it is not a gay resort. With its ideal climate, its peaceful, expansive scenery, and its quiet countryside, free of automobiles, it is ideal."

Next in popularity for wedding trips is the Canadian North Cape cruise providing for a stop-over in Bermuda and taking in the St. Lawrence and Saguenay Rivers, he said.

The Best Available.

"And many brides and grooms are going to Europe, Havana or South America. Most couples want, above all else, to make that honeymoon trip the best thety can afford even if it means stinting themselves later.

"Of course we arrange numerous trips to the West Coast, Niagara Falls, the Century of Progress, and Canada, but not so much for honeymooners. They want to get away from the hustle-bustle that is part of any sight-seeing tour. Bermuda offers beauty that is quiet, serene. That's why it is the modern honeymooners' paradise."

It would seem, then, the coral shores of these English-owned islands with their magical caves, and their sea gardens are supplanting the glories of Niagara in the minds of those taking wedding journeys. But L. B. Turner, formerly assistant manager of a hotel in Niagara and now a Washington visitor, is of a different opinion. He scouted the idea honeymooners no longer flock to the "Thunder of Waters," with its Goat Island excursion, Cave of the Winds, and view of the American and Horseshoe Falls.

Many Still Go.

"Plenty of honeymoon trails still lead to Niagara," he said. "I'll admit B's and G's (brides and grooms to you) don't make up the bulk of the tourist trade as in the old days, but I have yet to view the Falls, drive over to Goat Island or walk across Rainbow Bridge without seeing dozens of them."

How could he be sure they were to appropriate his term, B's and G's? Mightn't they be youngish, happily married persons taking an annual outing instead of a honeymoon?

His reply, prefaced by a chuckle, settled the matter. Native Niagarans, he said, had seen so many newlyweds, they could spot them without half trying.

"The gleam in their eyes gives them away. Standing with hands locked on the deck of the Maid of the Mist as it plies toward Horseshoe Falls, or clinging to each other in the elevator that zooms down toward the Cave of the Winds, they advertise they are just married, and they don't care who knows it."

Somebody has suggested, according to Mr. Turner, that honeymooners revel in watching the falls because the waters' tremendous plunge reminds them of the one they have just taken.

Open-Mouthed New-Weds.

"But anyway, even after watching B's and G's come and go in Niagara for 20 years, it still warms my heart to see them standing, open-mouthed—forgetting themselves and the fact they are newlyweds—contemplating the mighty spill of the seething cataract."

It would seem, then, Niagara Falls is still a sort of laboratory for the study of young marital love, though it is not, as formerly, the only, or even the major, one. For B's and G's—if you please—are anywhere and everywhere at this time of the year. Some sampling the delights of Europe, others glimpsing the tropic luxuriance of Havana or cycling along the palm-shaded Bermuda coast, and others, still—seeing Niagara.

But wherever they go, many would doubtless agree the old northern Europeans had it about right when they insisted the bride and bridegroom should remain at home. This custom, however, was supplemented by another, providing the bride and bridegroom must eat from the same plate and drink honey and wine for 30 days. Hence, the word "honeymoon," which comes directly from "honey month."

United States' Poverty Shocks Foreign Nurses

They Expected a Land of Opportunity but Found Suffering.

PAINTED as a land of opportunity, America was in many ways a shocking surprise to three foreign public health nurses now studying in our country.

"We had thought of America as a rich and young country," Imaranda Botez, of Rumania, said at the Dodge Hotel yesterday. "It was a shock to us when we saw the poverty-stricken condition of the people in the slums and mountain sections.

"Tenements we have in Europe, yes, and poverty and suffering, but at least the poor little houses are clean. When I saw the mountain people down in Tennessee with 10 or 15 children living in two rooms, and the dirt, filth and the flies, I realized poverty in America is even worse than in Europe."

Our Mortality Rate.

Mrs. Botez said she was also surprised to discover the United States has a higher mortality rate among mothers than any other country in the world.

"We do not have nearly so many obstetricians in our country," she said. "Most babies are delivered by midwives. But the midwives are carefully trained and paid by the State. In that way even the poorest persons have excellent care.

"Here your good doctors are in the cities, and the country people have poor care. In the hospitals the doctors are too rushed to give the proper attention. For that reason, although the United States has more money, and is a leader in medicine, many other countries have a lower death rate in maternity cases."

Public health nurses are paid better salaries in this country than any other, the young women agree. And the problem of the public health nurse are similar in all countries.

A Corrected Impression.

"Our greatest battle is against malaria and hookworm," Miss Yosa Colon, of Puerto Rico said. "These diseases attack the wealthy people as often as the poor ones, but we now have them well under control."

"I love my work, and make enough to live well on," said Miss Blanca Bermudo, of Spain. "We have an eight-hour day for all working women in Spain, but of ccurse when we are starting something new we sometimes get so interested we work overtime.

"There is a false impression about Spanish women I would like to correct. We do not spend our time on balconies with roses in our mouths listening to music. Look at me. I am a Spanish woman. There are thousands of others just like me. Women in my country have been in professions since before the war. They have only recently voted. But otherwise there has been no radical change since the republican form of government was installed."

Riding Sisters Achieve Many Blue Ribbons

Murrays and Andersons Have Remarkable Horse-show Success.

By Ware Torrey and Janet Owen.

RIDERS are taking their horse-show fences in threes. And it is quite a family affair.

The most immediate case in point is the striking success of three sisters, shown by two of them on succeeding days last week, and the third earlier in the season. Rosamond Murray, who first won recognition in riding before she was 12 years old, had set the standard for her sisters by winning the Good Hands Cup at the Brooklyn Junior Horse Show. Last week the youngest sister, Marcia, won the same trophy at the Cedar Valley Show. Theresa, the eldest at 16, followed suit in the Sands Point Show.

All three are qualified, by winning this contest, to enter the Good Hands Cup event at the National Horse Show. It is certainly a thorough way of representing one's family at the National.

Another famous trio of women riders, Edith, Mary and Florence Anderson, have carried off a long series of trophies for their mutual mantelpiece. Edith Anderson not only won the Good Hands Cup once, but proved there was no mistake about it by winning it 16 times. This streak of success caused the ruling that the cup should be won only once a year in a local show, by any one rider prior to the National show.

Mrs. Bernard F. Gimbel, of New York, and her daughters, Hope and Caral, make up another well known family three. Mrs. Gimbel is known, in addition to her general horsemanship, for being one of the few able side-saddle riders in modern shows. Hope and Caral have amassed between them a sizable yardage of blue ribbon.

Honeymooning Couples Gravitate to Tea House

"Honeymoon Tower," on the Premises, Lodestone to Just Marrieds; Traditions Say It Insures a Successful Marriage.

"HONEYMOON TOWER" stands on a hill overlooking Washington—the flag flying from the White House, the distant river, the pearly glow of the Capitol dome at night, the streaming lights and shadows that make the Monument a thing of ever-changing beauty after dark.

On the upper road to Alexandria and Mount Vernon, where, on a bold ridge of land, stands the colonial house owned by Phil Campbell, the Little Tea House nestles. Thirteen years ago two sisters, in a revolt against the monotony of work in a Government office, started a small tea house that never had a name until it came to be known simply as the "Little Tea House."

When the Little Tea House found success the Tower was built. It stands a bit to the south on a point of land where two roads meet. Honeysuckle, iris and bridal wreath creep about its base and scent the air. At night a soft blue light shines from the top that can be seen for miles.

The First Honeymooners.

A young couple who did much of their courting at the Little Tea House wanted the Tower for their honeymoon. They didn't mind that they had to run out in the morning for their bath; the scent of the honeysuckle and the rustle of the trees more than made up for that. They said they would stay a day at least, but they stayed four. They come back every year.

They were the first of the Tower's honeymooners, but not the first who passed honeymoon days at the Little Tea House. Even before the Tower was built couples found the friendly rooms high above the city the ideal place for their first days together.

There have been gay wedding breakfasts there. There is an interesting entry in the guest book, the first in that particular volume. The courtship had been carried on largely over the tables and in the garden of the Tea House. It was the day before the wedding and the groom and bride-elect had run off for a last dinner at their favorite place. They were asked to put their signatures in the new book. After Lilian Waters Grosvenor and Cabot Coville is written the address, "Tokyo, Japan." The bride said, "I've never been there, but that will be my address after tomorrow."

A Tradition Grows.

The young architect of the Madeira School, Waldron Faulkner, and his bride spent the first days of their honeymoon in the round tower room under the blue light. Mr. and Mrs. Allen Fay (she was Janet Wright, of Washington) occupied the magic place, and they, too, come back. Tradition is growing up about the Tower that a honeymoon there insures a happy marriage. No divorce has ever separated a couple who has stayed there.

There is a honeymoon couple in the tower now, a modernized tower with every convenience, even a small kitchen where the bride can make the morning coffee.

Before the days of the Honeymoon Tower more than one novelist linked the Little Tea House and romance, using it as a picturesque background for lovers' meetings. Nancy Hoyt, now Mrs. Edwin Curtis, who was one of the earliest friends of the place, depicted it in her first novel, "Roundabout."

Edwin Bateman Morris, in "The Silk Coquette," finds a secluded corner of the Tea House a fit setting for lovers' farewells said over tea and blueberry muffins. Mr. Morris always visits it when he comes to Washington.

Many are the noted names in the guest books. The wives of three Presidents have found it charming. So have novelists, poets and singers. Margaret Ayer Barnes, Lizette Woodworth Reese, Sara Bard Field and Erskine Scott Wood are among them. When Kate Smith is in town she always goes once at least to the Little Tea House.

There are names in the guest book written in many languages. One in beautiful Japanese characters, another in Persian with the English equivalent beside it. Strange strokes, explained by an address in Iceland, are on another page. From all parts of the world they come to the Little Tea House.

MRS. BERNARD GIMBEL, noted for side-saddle riding, up on Sweetheart. A water jump is all in the day's race, to her. Mrs. Gimbel and her two daughters, Hope and Caral, form one of the famous trios of feminine riders who corner the blue ribbon market at many shows of the Eastern circuit.

A Blind Composer 'Sees' Yellowstone

YELLOWSTONE PARK, Wyo., June 27 (Spl.).—Elizabeth Garrett, composer, author, and musical director of Roswell, N. Mex., who has been blind since birth, came this week to "see" Yellowstone Park. She came as a member of Roswell's delegation of seven attending the regional convention of the Business and Professional Women's Federation.

Pat Garrett, pioneer sheriff who put an end to the maraudings of Billy the Kid, was her father. All her life has been spent in the Southwest, and her songs reflect her intense love for that region and its people. "O Fair New Mexico," one of her compositions, is the State's official song. Other Nationally-famous compositions are: "My Creed," "Senorita," and a cycle on New Mexico tradition, including "Yucca," the State flower; "Paisano," the State bird, and the "Song to the Flag."

Baroness Deprecates Glamour And Sighs for Her Lost Health

FORTUNE, beauty and fame, all those things women sigh for, are unimportant, warns Hortense Larrabee Sherry, the former Baroness Bemelmans.

Mrs. Sherry, who has been a motion picture actress, artists' model, concert violinist, "Miss Buffalo" in 1926, married into the Austrian nobility, and who is now in Washington on her way West, where she will enter a tubercular sanitarium, declares she would gladly give every glamorous episode in her life to regain her lost health.

"Wealth, position, nothing matters without health," Mrs. Sherry said yesterday, recalling some of the more romantic events in her life. Her favorite story is of how she met the Austrian baron, who later became her husband.

"I was giving violin concerts in Europe when he heard me play," she said. "He saw me and came back stage to meet me. It was love at first sight for both of us."

The baron took his bride to live in his castle, high in the Austrian hills. There she spent a few happy years, met many interesting people, and her two children were born. When her husband died, the young widow took her two children and returned to America.

She resumed her career on the concert stage, but was forced to give it up because of her health.

After her second marriage to Michael Sherry, Alabama lawyer, she went to live in Montgomery, Ala.

"I was especially interested in the South," she explained, "because my ancestors were all Southern. My great grandfather fought in the Civil War, and Jefferson Davis was my great-granduncle."

Mrs. Sherry hopes some day to return to Austria, in order that her children may live in the ancestral castle, and her elder son may inherit his father's title.

Low-Priced Hand Cream Is Discovered

In Spite of Inexpensiveness It Has the Necessary Quality.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

BEAUTIFUL hands need no comment. Unfortunately, though, the care of them does. Scores of women have lovely nails, tapering fingers, but they have allowed the skin on their hands to become dry and wrinkled. Such negligence is in most cases unintentional, the result of ignorance regarding the care of the skin. If they shop through the stores they see endless creams and lotions recommended for hand care. They can not believe all of them will do all they're said to do. And yet they've no way of knowing which one will.

The truth of the matter is this: Hand preparations backed by a reliable manufacturer, sold by a reputable firm, do have ingredients beneficial to the hands. Some are good. Others better. It is not the price tag that counts.

Right now a hand cream with a name not likely to strike a familiar chord with most shoppers is selling at a reduced price of 85 cents.

But it's a good cream. Most women have heard or even proven that olive oil is a fine treatment for the hands. It keeps them smooth, and prevents the nails from becoming brittle. This cream is built on an olive oil base, and also contains almond oil. Rubbed well into the skin and given a few seconds to absorb it will not leave the hands greasy and sticky. And it goes a long way, used regularly, toward keeping them smooth and young looking.

New Convenience.

A waterproof compact comes as a decided relief in the way of summer merchandise. So far the display cases and counters have been flooded with sun oils and lotions, beach bags, bathing caps and suntan powders. But here at last is a real novelty.

It is a composition compact which fastens to the belt of a bathing suit, and is as useful for the gentlemen as the ladies. There's space enough inside for half a dozen or more cigarettes and some matches. It comes equipped with a little metal comb. A small compartment in the top enables the ladies to carry a bit of powder along. All this convenience for 89 cents!

• • • •

New Card Specialty.

There's nothing with more "it" for a shopper than a card specialty. And a card specialty is usually one or two conveniences fastened to a pasteboard card covered with directions and suggestions. They usually cost little and answer some need.

There's no use compiling a list of those which have appeared, for they've inevitably been gobbled up. That's the likely fate of this one which includes a paradown face patter and paradown puff. Don't be nonplussed at "paradown." To all appearances it's an extra fine grade of soft, pliable rubber.

The patter is a handy size to wield, and is much better than inexperienced fingers for patting a cream into the skin. The puff is porus and washes beautifully. After this paradown puff is washed it's softier and fluffier than ever, making it one of the most satisfactory and sanitary puffs so far. The ensemble, puff and patter, is 25 cents.

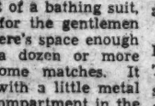
The Perfume Problem.

Contrary to some opinions, women are not contrary people. But they do have contrary ideas. A young woman at a downtown store sells sweet scented powders, sachets, and perfumes. She says at least half a dozen women have remarked to her lately that they loved perfume so much they feared using it during the summer as they knew the'd use too much. And of course, too much or too strong perfume in hot weather is disagreeable.



She said they solved their problem with sachets made of compressed lavender blossom which hung in their closets, kept in kerchief boxes or linen chests. These have a subtle summery fragrance that lasts—and lasts.

Play Money.

Play money isn't exactly a game. It's really more of a toy. And although it is manufactured for children an amazing number of adults buy it. They like to use it in parlor gambling games instead of real money, and settle up in the end.

Of course, children adore it. From their cash box they can take dimes, nickels, pennies, gold pieces and even paper bills. As a matter of fact, paper money is a good thing for children to play with. They learn how to make change, how to drive bargains and how to understand money values without actual experience with cash.

Decorative Drinking.

A Connecticut avenue shop has some chrome domes designed to fit over the tops of bottles. Each dome is graced with a chrome sphere marked with rye, Scotch or gin. There's a cork stopper which fits into the standard size bottle and does an ornamental job of keeping it air-tight. Three domes for $1.

Cooking in Armenia Differs Slightly From That in Syria, Turkey, Arabia

ARMENIAN WOMEN MAKE THE BREAD of the Levantine in their open-air kitchens. The bread is rolled out paper thin, then baked or dry-fried on a convex metal sheet—as shown at the right—under which is built a small fire of twigs. A pile of the finished bread is stacked at the left of the figures.

Wheat Used Extensively and Large Armenian Vegetables.

Today's trek takes us over desert and plateau, valley and mountain to Armenia. Here, where rose petals are used in making desserts, and vine leaves take the place of molds, we sample the native shish kebab, sip the laurel leaf liqueur and find new glamour in an Eastern cuisine.

This article is one of a series on international foods.

By Susan Mills.

IN THE kitchen Armenia, Syria, Turkey, Arabia and India are all second cousins. Their kettles contain practically the same ingredients, their dishes are similar in appearance, their methods of preparation alike.

To isolate Armenia's kitchen is like pulling a petal from a flower. The one resembles the others, yet slight differences are to be noticed. So out of the great kitchen of the East, we stop at Armenia's corner, to taste and examine, dine and approve.

Wheat is a national staple. Their characteristic dish is boulgour pilaff, cracked wheat sauted in butter and seasoned with tomato sauce. The most popular meat dish is shish kebab, lamb grilled on skewers, cooked in much the same manner American Boy Scouts broil meat on sticks.

The fertile valleys and plateaus of Asia Minor produce fine vegetables of every description: Cauliflower that is larger than your head, eggplant that is a glorification of our modest vegetable. Eggplant, tomatoes, peppers, squash and cucumbers are stuffed with a mixture of uncooked rice, raw meat, pine nuts, the characteristic seasoning, allspice; butter and meat stock. This stuffing can be used in all the vegetables, further heightened in flavor by tomato sauce.

The Meat Situation.

Lamb is eaten almost exclusively. Pork is almost unknown. Beef is used in some parts of the country, though along the seacoast olive oil is used for cooking in place of beef fat.

To Americans, used to simple, light desserts, the Armenian kaymak would seem almost a full meal. Kaymak is a highly condensed whipped cream of the consistency of cream cheese. Curl your mental tongue around their rose petal jelly, varti anoush. It is made, literally, of fresh rose petals.

Suppose you order an Armenian dinner. It would be something like this: Two appetizers, perhaps, then yalanji yaprak, rice and onions wrapped in grapevine leaves and cooked in olive oil; biber dolma, green pepper stuffed with the rice and meat mixture; then shish kebab, grilled lamb; a dessert, ayva compote; a dish of stewed quinces and orange compote, with pine nuts as flavoring; then the pastry, paklava, layers of crisps soaked with honey or sugar syrup. You might top off the meal with dark Oriental coffee and a cordial that is an extract of laurel leaves.

Some recipes will add variety to your table if you wish to transplant a little of the Oriental flavor to your own home.

Patlijan Silkmeh.

Brown one pound of ground lamb in fat. Add a cup of chopped onion, a cup of tomatoes, and season with salt, pepper and a little spice. Cut eggplant into one-fourth-inch slices and brown in fat. Place a layer of eggplant and a layer of meat mixture in a baking dish, alternating until dish is filled. Add a little water and bake one hour in slow oven.

Yahni.

Wash and trim green beans and place in a kettle, add a small amount of water and cover. Steam for 10 to 15 minutes. Add an onion, sliced, and two or three fresh tomatoes. Season with olive oil, salt and pepper. Add a few pieces of cooked lamb if desired, cover and cook slowly one hour.

Sarma.

2 pounds ground meat
1 cup raw rice
1 onion, chopped fine
6 fresh tomatoes

Mix all ingredients thoroughly, season with salt and pepper. Place small amount of mixture on a grape leaf and make into a roll.

Lamb Is Favorite Meat, With Beef Appearing Occasionally.

Continue until mixture is used. Place a few meat bones in a kettle, place the rolls in layers over them, cover with water of meat stock, holding the sarma in place with a lid or plate. Boil at least an hour.

Next week we may hear the click of castanets, and glimpse the haughty swish of mantillas. But it's to Spain's kitchen we go, where the jangle of pots and pans is the loudest noise, and the mantilla is supplanted by the white cap.

Dark Jacket Dresses Travel Smartly in Airships or Trains

By Amos Parrish.

NEW YORK, June 27. — Air travel lines always picture their smart feminine passengers descending from the plane looking just as fresh and unwrinkled as when they stepped in. And whether or not this is only a pictured ideal, surely it's the way all women would like to look at the end of a trip no matter how they travel.

Your chances are best to look that way if you choose a dark-colored costume. And dark colors—black, navy, brown, beet root—are fashionable as well as practical.

Plain colors are good, but small prints or fine stripes even better. They don't show so plainly the effects of sitting.

Cool Materials.

This dark colored costume should be a cool one. For it's easy to slip on an extra coat if your train climbs up into the mountains, but not so easy to cool off.

Heavy sheers are fine materials. Some of the new dark colored, tailored chiffons are suitable. All kinds of lightweight silks will prove comfortable.

Now that many cottons and linens have received the new uncrushable finish, you'll see those, too, train-traveling. Voile is one of the cottons with this finish. And it is sheer and comes in dark colors. Or if you don't like the sheer idea, try printed sateen. It travels well.

This dark color, cool dress certainly should be a jacket dress. The jacket gives the finished well-groomed look which is desirable in public conveyances.

Pick Becoming Length.

Finger-tip or almost knee-length are good lengths for the jacket. But watch it, to see that it's the most becoming length. Don't let it cut your figure in an awkward proportion.

White touches are smart . . . If the trip is not so long that you can keep them fresh looking. Detachable white collars and cuffs are a good idea as they can be removed and a clean set substituted toward the end of the journey.

Whether or not you travel, white touches and accessories are fashionable and we have a leaflet explaining the best ways to clean them—shoes, hats and so on. If you'd like it, send us the coupon with requested inclosures.

Chinese Food Makes a Hit With Experts

Connoisseurs Go for Chop Suey First, Swedish Dishes Second.

NEW YORK, June 27 (AP).—What do America's culinary queens the connoisseurs of hickory smoked ham and chicken a la Maryland—seek when the dine out?

Chop suey.

Chinese cookery, with plenty of bamboo shoots, received the largest number of votes when 2,000 home economics specialists, here for the annual convention of the American Home Economics Association, visited New York's foreign food haunts last night.

Their second choice was Swedish cookery, and their third, German. Japanese and Russian dishes drew the next largest crowds.

The Chinese restaurant which drew the most guests by its bright lights and bamboo shoots also had the longest dinner. Twelve courses. It lasted several hours.

It began with har gour and deem sum. Then came chun goon and won ton.

After some Holland tou niu ju and choa fun shih, the meal tapered off with met mee fee young and ku lao ju.

A private Swedish club in an old New York mansion, attracted the group second in size with its smorgasbord—an array of appetizers.

Mme. Pearl Violet Metzelthin, who has lived in eleven countries and speaks six languages, and Miss Margaret Kingsley, who is on the staff of a woman's magazine, directed the visitors to foreign restaurants of ten nationalities.

The delegates were from cities as widely separated as Corvallis, Oreg., and Burlington, Vt.; Austin, Tex., and Detroit.

"They all want Chinese food," lamented Mme. Metzelthin. "They want it more than bean paste or herring salad or Nurnburg beer or red cabbage cooked in claret."

The visiting experts who turned their faces toward chop suey missed the dish with the longest name: Kaymakli inmek kadayif, an American delicacy—an exotic bread, toasted and soaked in syrup.

What Today Means

"Cancer."

If June 28 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:45 to 11:45 a. m., from 3:45 to 5:45 p. m. and from 7:45 to 9:45 p. m. The danger periods are from 6:45 to 8:45 a. m., from 12:45 to 2:45 p. m. and from 9:45 to 11:45 p. m.

Business on this date should be greatly stimulated by a number of new prospects, with deals being negotiated. Be cautious if a stranger tries to interest you in a promotional proposition. Bear in mind that all that glitters is not gold. A fancy prospectus, beautifully illustrated, with an alluring array of "expectations" and promises, many times is only the literary product of an overly optimistic promoter's brain. There might be money coming to you from an unexpected source or as a gift, which will prove a pleasant surprise.

If a woman and June 28 is your birthday, your cheerful outlook and optimistic regard of life in general will save you many anxious moments. Your very lack of fear will enable you to rise above the mental pits of pessimism, that do so much to retard one's progress. You have a great deal of happiness to look forward to. Love may prove to be your stepping stone to success. Possessing an artistic nature, you should endeavor to make either literature, painting, interior decorating or designing, your principal interest. A husband, in full sympathy with your ambition, might prove a great help.

The child born on June 28, when it reaches its teens, will give evidence of possessing a very analytical mind. This child should receive a schooling which will enable it later on to take a collegiate course in which it evinces the greatest interest. When quite young it may display a very strong individuality, especially in the way of self-expression. As long as it does not prove offensive, encourage this trait.

The man born on June 28 usually has many of the characteristics of the fundamentalists. What he once believes or accepts as truth or fact, he clings to with persistency. If born on this date, the ideal place for you to live is a suburban town or the country. You should find a great deal of contentment in either horticultural or agricultural work.

SLANDER

By Arthur Somers Roche

Gerald Gerrish, attorney, has advanced money to Martha Blaisdell on her own securities and spread the rumor he is supporting her. She upbraids him; he visits her apartment to remonstrate and dies of a stroke. Herbert Cranston, her fiance, and Dr. Peter Baxter, who also loves her, smuggle the body from the apartment to avert scandal. Only Ansted, Gerrish's valet, suspects.

"HE might, conceivably, have been here. But I wasn't; I was on Long Island," Martha said.

"But when you came back from Long Island!" Ansted's voice rose shrilly. "What did you do to him then?"

"Had he been here I would have done what I'm going to do now," she replied.

"And what's that?" he demanded.

She picked up the telephone.

"Get me police headquarters, central," she said.

Earlier today, Dr. Peter Baxter had suggested to Ansted that the valet call the police. The suggestion had terminated a conversation. Now, as Martha spoke to the operator, the valet's face whitened. He belonged to that all too common class of people who like to bully, to make trouble, to be overbearing, but who are terrified when trouble turns upon them. In his heart he did not believe that Gerrish had been the victim of foul play, but the circumstances surrounding his master's death were sufficiently mysterious to excite his curiosity. Oddly enough Gerrish had won the man's admiration and affection. Because Ansted was a pliant instrument in the many little nastinesses in which the broker had been concerned, Gerrish had admitted the man to intimacies. In return for his friendliness he had received a dogged loyalty from Ansted.

Couldn't Face Police.

Martha Blaisdell had contemptuously dismissed Gerrish from her life. Gerrish, needing a confidant always, had told Ansted of Martha's treatment of him and of Cranston's threats. Now that Gerrish had died suddenly, gratitude for the dead man's confidences made the valet troublesome.

But the police were people whom he did not care to face at the moment. After all, despite the evidence which he had gathered during the day, he had only the vaguest sort of charges to bring. And his entry into Martha's apartment might very well bring him into difficulties.

He held up a trembling hand.

"Don't do that, Miss Blaisdell," he said in quick panic. "I'll get out."

He did get out; as she lowered the receiver into place he wheeled and almost ran from the room. Not until he was out upon the sidewalk again did coolness return to him. She was bluffing, he told himself. Why, if he told the police his suspicions, she would be involved in scandal that she could never live down. Only, if she weren't bluffing, the fact that she had called the police, that he had forced himself into her presence, might not look well. When crime has been committed, one who is aware of the fact ought to go directly to the police; if one aware of transgression temporizes with the guilty party he lays himself open to suspicion.

Both Were Scoundrels.

Anstad told himself this as he walked slowly toward Broadway. But he didn't have enough to take to the police. His mean heart pounded with excited rage as he realized this. His loyalty to Gerrish made him hate the people whom Gerrish hated. If there were only some way of wreaking upon them the injury that Gerrish had planned for them!

One can not serve a scoundrel for many years without becoming a scoundrel himself. Gerrish, by his admission to intimacy, had made his friends the friends of the valet, and his enemies the enemies of Ansted. In his heart Ansted knew that Martha had not been the mistress of Gerrish. He had been shrewd enough to realize when his master lied, but his shrewdness in no way lessened his regard for Gerrish. Like master like man is as true as like father like son. All the venom that had been in Gerrish was transferred upon his death to Ansted. And it was in a mood of impotent fury that the valet stepped into a speakeasy on Forty-third street.

Highballs Had Effect.

He had walked all the way uptown; the unwonted exercise on this hot summer night had not improved his temper. And three highballs combined with excitement and the sultriness of the atmosphere to make him reckless, eager to talk. And it is a peculiar fact that although we may find the world deaf to praise, there are always ears at hand to listen to slander.

Such ears were present in the speakeasy as Ansted entered. They were attached to a round head upon which black hair grew sleekly. Bird-like eyes, that looked upon an object, appraised it, and looked elsewhere, were set on either side of a hawk-like nose in that round head. Thin lips, always ready to curl in a mocking jeer, were beneath the nose. In short, the countenance belonged to Georgie Gotham, which was the nom de plume of the man advertised as the roving reporter of the Planet.

Gotham never forgot a face any more than he ever fogot a bit of news. He had once attended a party given by Gerry Gerrish. To his credit be it said that he had never attended another. As he once told an intimate, "I'll print stuff that comes from the gutter, but I won't go into the gutter looking for it." Not too convincing a declaration of principle, but better than no principle at all.

Ansted Recognized.

He recognized now the sallow, moody face of Ansted. It took him a moment to place the man, but when he did his thin lips puckered faintly. He had been in the Planet once today and had heard other reporters mention Gerrish's death, and he had listened to comment on Martha Blaisdell's admission that the dead man had brought suit against her. It was the kind of story that Gotham would have liked to use, but the fact that it was already known to the press at large barred it so far as he was concerned. He never rehashed things in his writings.

But now he stared curiously at Ansted. Of course, it was natural enough that the man should seek a certain solace in liquor, losing his master also meant losing his job, probably. There was nothing extraordinary in the fact that the valet should indulge in a drink or two. But there was an air of suppressed excitement about the man that didn't seem to bear any relation to grief of depression. Impulsively—many of his best news stories had been the result of impulse—Gotham rose from his table and walked over to Ansted.

Conversation Started.

"You were Gerrish's man, weren't you? I'm Gotham, of the Planet. I seem to remember having seen you at a party Gerrish gave last year."

He sat down casually, easily, and signaled a waiter.

"Tough luck about Gerrish," he went on. "I didn't know he hit the booze as hard as all that. I've seen him hitting it up around town, but not like a real drunkard."

"He wasn't a real drunkard," said Ansted hotly. "He'd been drinking heavily recently, but that was because he was depressed."

"What was on his mind?" asked Gotham. "But I suppose he felt pretty badly about Miss Blaisdell. Sort of a lousy trick bringing that suit against her, at that. But he's dead and I suppose we shouldn't judge him harshly. Maybe if he'd lived he'd have withdrawn it."

Question Brought Up.

"Why would he have withdrawn it?" demanded Ansted angrily. "He gave her money and she was glad to get it."

Gotham shrugged.

"Oh, well, it's just one of those things. Don't you think you've had enough?" he asked, as Ansted now beckoned a waiter. "You don't want to pop off the way your boss did, do you?"

"How do you know how he popped off?" demanded Ansted.

"Cerebral hemorrhage, brought on by excessive alcohol. Isn't that it?" He asked the question idly, making conversation until he should finish his drink. He was utterly unprepared for Ansted's reply.

"That's what Dr. Baxter says," sneered the valet. "A doctor can say anything, can't he? You or I could walk into any doctor's office and if we died there, the doctor's word would be taken as to the cause of death, wouldn't it?"

Gotham's mind was instantly alert. The vaporings of semidrunken men seldom amounted to anything, but sometimes they were exceedingly important.

"Well, why not?"

Didn't Know Doctor.

"What would my master be doing in Dr. Baxter's office?" cried Ansted. "He didn't know the doctor. He'd never met him. But last night Dr. Baxter talked to some process-servers about Mr. Gerrish. And Mr. Gerrish never went there for treatment. He went there to tell Baxter where he headed in—if he went there at all."

The valet downed his drink and instantly, unmindful of his advice of a moment ago. Gotham called the waiter and another drink was set before the man.

"You must be cockeyed," said Gotham contemptuously. His derision was carefully assumed. "If Gerrish went there—why, you fathead, he died there."

"Who says so? Dr. Baxter?" Ansted's sneer matched the newspaperman's.

"Well, where do you think he died?" asked Gotham.

"I don't know where he died or how he died, but I know it wasn't in Dr. Baxter's office."

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Too Much Food.

Bad health habits are sometimes acquired by following lines of least resistance. One can not work hard all day and then burn the midnight oil and do so for long. Burning the candle at both ends may give temporarily a brighter light, but it is the added illumination that too often precedes total darkness.

Too much food may place as great a strain on the system as too much exercise, both resulting in overfatigue. Overloading the digestive system may be compared to the unskilled stoker who chokes his fire by piling on too much fuel. Overeating usually results in storing food within the body. The tissues can not use excess baggage. Furthermore, overeating taxes the excretory functions of the body and lays a particularly heavy load upon the liver and kidneys. This liver and kidney load calls for more blood, as increased activity of any part of the body demands increased circulation.

The burning of food within the system calls for more oxygen, just as the burning of more fuel in the furnace calls for a heavier draft. A sudden or steady gain in weight just as a sudden or steady loss in weight should be promptly investigated. In excessively fat people there is a tendency for the heart muscle to become infiltrated with fat, causing the muscle fibers to wither (atrophy), thus weakening the contracting power of the heart.

In this eating matter we are inclined to consult our appetite rather than to consider our health. We should be concerned with how little food may maintain normal body weight and activity. A careful analysis of the food intake of normal individuals will show, as a rule, a daily consumption of 20 to 30 per cent more food than the body requires. This has been shown by surveys made among classes of individuals. Hunger in the normal adult may not be an accurate criterion as to whether or not one needs food, and can not be safely relied upon. It is far wiser to stop eating before that "full feeling" is experienced. Substantial, ordinary food is usually the more nourishing; delicacies the more pleasing. Few of us realize that our total daily food consumption is not alone that eaten at the home table. Account must be taken of the bit of candy, the bar of chocolate, and the ice cream soda, all of which may amount in calories during the day to startling proportions. When food is consumed in this form a corresponding decrease in amount must be observed at regular meal time.

There are, of course, those who need an excess of food in order to build the body to a resistance that will withstand infection or disease, but even in this situation food is only one factor in combating infection and may even, unless properly regulated, prove a deterring factor to recovery. Much will depend on the state of the digestive system.

A small proportion of our population is definitely undernourished. This proportion, however, is minimal when one considers the wide economic distress.

Cooking Course for Prospective Husbands Tremendous Success

NEW YORK, June 27 (Spl.).—A cooking course for prospective husbands is suggested through the work of Miss Daisy M. Stackhouse, teacher in the Bedford (Ohio) High School, who is now attending the annual convention of the American Home Economics Association, opening today at the Hotel Pennsylvania.

Miss Stackhouse was accompanied to New York by four boys, members of her class in home economics, who are also attending the convention.

The curriculum introduced and followed by Miss Stackhouse in teaching the boys provided for a wide variety of other domestic duties than cooking.

"First they learn to measure," she said. "Then they learn how to wash dishes, sweep and keep the kitchen in order. We teach the preparation of breakfast foods first, then luncheon and dinner foods. When the course is over they know how to make baked apples, cocoa, cinnamon toast, muffins, pancakes, salads, soups, desserts, meats and meat substitute dishes, vegetables, rolls, cakes, pies and cookies."

A third of the time, she further explained, is devoted to homework in diets and the relations of foods to the body.

The course has proved very popular with the boys of the Bedford High School, where the class was founded by Miss Stackhouse seven years ago.

"We don't take the class in place of anything else," one of the boys said. "It's just an extra three hours a week, besides a little home work. But everybody can't take the course. About 30, I think, tried to get in last January, but only 18 were admitted.

The others, according to another of the boys, were excluded because their averages were not up to 85.

"We take the course because we want to know about that sort of stuff," he asserted. "It's easy and we want to know how to cook when we go camping."

Every Conceivable Force
WORKED TO TEAR THESE TIRES TO PIECES

But NOT ONE CORD LOOSENED!
NOT ONE TREAD SEPARATED!
Not one Blowout!

AS thirty-three speed demons careened and slid around the steep banked curves of the hot brick track, tires shrieked and smoked . . . break-neck speeds, 150 miles and more down the straightaway—tremendous centrifugal force tugging to rip the tread from the body of the tire. In fact, every conceivable force worked to tear the tire to pieces, but not one cord loosened—not one tread separated—and not a single blowout. What amazing proof of Tire Strength—Safety—Quality and Dependability!

Every one of the thirty-three drivers at the Indianapolis 500-mile sweepstakes chose and bought Firestone High Speed Tires. The fact that not one of the 132 tires failed is your greatest guarantee of the Extra Safety—Strength — and Dependability built into Firestone Tires.

The New Firestone High Speed Tire for 1934 is Safety-Protected on the outside by a wider tread of flatter contour, deeper non-skid, more and tougher rubber, giving you more than 50% longer non-skid mileage —Safety-Protected on the inside by eight additional pounds of pure rubber absorbed by every 100 pounds of cords. This additional rubber surrounds every cotton fiber inside every cord in every ply. This is accomplished by the Firestone patented process of Gum-Dipping, which soaks the cords in liquid rubber, counteracting damaging frictional heat, the greatest enemy of tire life.

MAKE THIS TEST YOURSELF

Note how the rubber in a Firestone Tire clings to the high stretch Gum-Dipped cords. This greater adhesion and strength is made possible by the Firestone patented process of Gum-Dipping.

Note how the rubber pulls away from cords that have not been Gum-Dipped. Regardless of the number of cord plies in tires not built with Gum-Dipped cords, friction will develop intense heat, and heat will separate the plies—very often causing blowouts. Only in Firestone Tires are friction and heat counteracted by Gum-Dipping.

Your Firestone Dealer is prepared to let you make, for yourself, the amazing test illustrated above.

Shute in Golf Tie for Third In Britain

Cotton Leads, With Record 67; U. S. Defending Champ Has 71.

Sarazen, Smith, Kirkwood Drop Far Back in Running.

By Gayle Talbot.

SANDWICH, England, June 27 (AP).—Henry Cotton, with a 67, and a score of other Britons teamed today with a cold spring rain in the opening round of the 72-hole British open golf championship to put the damper on what has been heralded as a "red hot American golf invasion."

After the rain had done its part no less than 14 shotmakers, including Denny Shute, of Philadelphia, the defending champion, had equaled or shattered St. Georges' par of 72 in one of the lowest scoring first rounds in the history of the championship.

The rain got in the first blow when it took all the polish off the games of Gene Sarazen, the tournament favorite, and MacDonald Smith after which it ceased patriotically long enough to enable Cotton and his cohorts to entrench themselves for the second 18-hole round tomorrow.

Shute Ties For Third.

Only Shute, fortunate enough to escape the morning downpour, held his own against a swift succession of sub-par rounds produced by the home forces this afternoon. Shute's 71, tying him with six others for third place, was a severe blow to betting commissioners who have been wagering large sums against the philadelphian's chances of repeating on the strength of his erratic qualifying play.

The remaining three professionals in the delegation from the United States were well off the pace, with Joe Kirkwood carding a 74, Sarazen taking 75 and Mac Smith slipping to a 77.

Cotton, whose best placing in the British open to date was seventh in 1933, played almost infallible golf in his attempt to lower the amateur-pro record of 66 he set at St. Georges on Monday. Out in 31—the same as on that record-breaking round—Cotton suffered his only lapse at the 11th hole where he slipped a stroke to par. However, he quickly rectified this error with a birdie at the 12th hole and finished the nine for a 36.

Breaks Scoring Record.

The 27-year old British pro gained a three-stroke advantage over his nearest pursuer, Fred Taggart, who did the course in 34-36 for a 70, and also broke the first round low-scoring record of 68 held jointly by Bobby Jones and Walter Hagen.

Suddenly recovering his game, just as he did a year ago, when he put together four 73's to tie with Craig Wood and then win the play-off, Shute played steadily for his 71 and entered a seven-way tie for third place with Bert Hodson, Bill Laidlaw, A. H. Padgham, Charles A. Whitcombe, M. Dallemange and Cecil Denny.

Disputes with his caddy and uncertain putting plagued Sarazen on both sides of his round. Besides three-putting two greens and missing several putts, he got tangled up with a couple of bunkers, particularly at the par four thirteenth hole where he took a six. He was out in 37 and back in 38.

Kirkwood dodged the rain, but hit a wobbly streak along the back nine to wind up with a 74 after going out in 35.

Smith Putts Poorly.

Ragged putting accounted for Mac Smith's taking a 38-39—77 and just about dashed his hopes for another year of capturing his first National championship.

Probably the day's most spectacular round was that by Taggart, who required only 21 putts in shooting a 70.

Notables who apparently shot themselves right out of the tournament included Angel de la Torre, five times winner of the Spanish Open championship, and J. S. Forrester, 79 each; Lister Hartley, Syd Fairweather and Robert Sweeney, American student at Oxford, 80 each, and Aubrey Boomer, 82.

Canzoneri-Klick Bout Is Postponed

New York, June 27 (AP).—Rain, which started to fall only a few hours before Frankie Klick and Tony Canzoneri were to have climbed into the ring at Ebbets Field for their 15-round lightweight fight tonight, brought postponement of the bout until tomorrow night.

The crowd was already filing into the big ball park in Brooklyn when the rain set in and Promoter Al Weill immediately ordered the postponement as the forecast was for showers all through tonight, but fair and warmer tomorrow.

Miss Babcock Wimbledon Victor

Four American Women in Running for Crown; Rain Halts Play.

WIMBLEDON, England, June 27 (AP).—Four American women remained tonight in the running for the tennis crown forfeited by Helen Wills Moody in the all-England championships, but one of them undoubtedly can thank the day's intermittent showers for the fact she is included.

The second round match between Helen Jacobs, of Berkeley, Calif., the American champion, and Dorothy Andrus, of Stamford, Conn., was postponed because of rain until tomorrow. If Miss Jacobs wins, she will join the other two Americans now in the third round, Carolin Babcock, of Los Angeles, and Sarah Palfrey, of Boston.

Meets Mrs. Mellows.

Miss Babcock, whose defeat of Colette Rosambert, the French covered court champion, by 7—5, 6—2, was one of today's few features, next will encounter Mrs. A. H. Mellows, of England. Miss Palfrey, decisive winner of her second round match with Miss E. M. Dearman, of England, 6—3, 6—2, will meet the winner of a postponed match between Mrs. Kitty McKane Godfree and Miss F. S. Ford.

Virginia Rice, Boston girl who ranks ninth on the American list, was the only casualty in the U. S. forces today. She put up stout resistance before yielding to Mrs. Harry Hopman, of Australia, 6—4, 10—8.

With all American contenders in the men's singles enjoying a day's letup, Jack Crawford, of Australia, the defending champion, gave the gallery a brief thrill by dropping the first set to Ian G. Collins, of Scotland. The rain held up the match an hour and a half, but Crawford finally swept Collins off the courts with the loss of only 3 games out of the last 19. The scores were 4—6, 6—2, 6—0, 6—1.

Gains by Victory.

The victory put Crawford into the last 16 along with Henry. W. (Bunny) Austin, of England, who defeated Don Turnbull, of Australia, 6—1, 6—4, 6—3, and Gottfried von Cramm, of Germany, who disposed of E. D. Andrews, giant New Zealander, 6—1, 6—4, 6—4.

The survivors in the women's singles included Eileen Whittingstall, Cilli Aussem, Frau Hilda Krahwinkel Sperling, Dorothy Round, Peggy Scriven, Rene Mathieu and Lolette Payotte, besides the Misses Babcock and Palfrey.

The American doubles champions, George M. Lott, jr. and Lester R. Stoefen, smashed past the English combination of R. K. Tinkler and C. D. R. Tuckey, 6—4, 6—2, 4—6, 6—2, and will tackle the Czech Davis Cup stars, Menzel and Hecht, next.

Foreman Tips Beam at 131 Pounds

Weight Hazard for Bout With Sarron Here Is Removed.

STRIPPED as nude as the top of Henry Firpo's hirsuteless head, Al Foreman jiggled the beam of a superspecial, hair-trigger scales at at exactly 131 pounds yesterday to definitely set at rest the belief that his fight with Pete Sarron at Griffith Stadium tomorrow night might be postponed or canceled because of weight differences.

In hitting 131 after a long train ride from Canada, a heavy lunch, glass of orangeade and only the lightest of workouts, the lightweight champion of the British Empire, holder of the Lonsdale belt, lightweight and junior lightweight champion of Canada, welterweight champion of Australia, and what not, won the first round of a prefight battle that has been raging ever since he refused to post a forfeit to guarantee his weighing not more than 131 for Sarron.

Sarron Fails to Weigh.

Sarron's contract specifically states that he will not do battle with Foreman if the latter weights more than 131 (or 130, give or take one pound, in the parlance of the prize ring). In the ordinary course of events, Foreman would not have arrived on the scene of action until tonight at the earliest, but he put in a special appearance for the informal weighing-up staged for the benefit of the skeptics yesterday. Foreman insisted that if he was to be weighed in advance, so must Sarron, but following a strenuous workout, the Syrian Smasher failed to put in an appearance at the Riggs bath, as tacitly greed. Sarron has never weighed more than 130 for a local appearance, and there is no doubt that he will be able to make the required poundage and salvage his own forfeit of $100.

Errors Fatal as Reds Lose to Braves, 8-4

Cincinnati, June 27 (AP).—Berger banged out his eleventh home run of the season, after reaching a count of two and three, as the Boston Braves defeated the Cincinnati Reds 8 to 4 today.

Both teams hit freely throughout, but loose fielding was fatal to the Reds. Two muffs by Koenig alone in the fourth spoiled what should have been a double-play, and meant at least two of the four runs the Braves scored in that inning.

Capt. Jim Bottomley of the Reds was on the bench, his left arm too sore to permit him to play after being thrown out of joint yesterday.

Cubs Win, 5 to 1; Bush Comes Back

Dodgers, Held to 6 Hits, Lose 7th Straight.

Chicago, June 27 (AP).—Guy Bush returned to the pitching mound today for the first time since May 31, held the Brooklyn Dodgers to six hits and one run and the Chicago Cubs won, 5 to 1, to make it four straight over the visitors and extend their winning streak to seven games. It was the seventh straight defeat for Brooklyn.

Bush has been out of action because of an injured shoulder, but he showed no sign of an injury as he turned back the hapless Dodgers without a score after the second and aided in a four-run attack on Leslie Munns in the second inning which sewed up the ball game.

Babe Herman started the second round festivities with a double and Kiki Cuyler promptly lashed a homer. Don Hurst followed with a double, Billy Jurges, who went to the hospital after the game to have his appendix removed, tripled and Bush singled.

Marines Bow, 8-2, To Chesapeakes

Ex-Minor Leaguers Rally Late in Game.

Post Field, Quantico, Va., June 26 (Spl.).—After staging a gallant uphill fight against the strong traveling Chesapeake Club, of West Point, Va., the Quantico Marines wilted under a torrid sun in the seventh and eighth innings and were forced to bow to the visitors, 8 to 2. Manager Wolfe showed the Leatherneck rooters the classiest combine to visit Quantico this season. All former Piedmont leaguers, with the exception of Pitcher Tom Proctor, who signed his last pay check for the Huntington Hornets of the Mid-Atlantic League last season, the Chesapeakes were in a critical situation going into the seventh holding on to a one-run lead, 3-2.

An error by Gene Bracci, combined with "Whiffy" Thomas' wild heave to first, helped the making of two alien tallies. In the eighth, with Thomas on the mound, Tomko and Tommy Wolfe teed-off for tremendous right-field clouts, each good for a trio of hassocks and three more runs crossed the plate.

Rookies' Clout Beats Giants For Cards

DeLancey's Hit Wins 8-7 Game for Dizzy Dean; Frisch Ejected.

ST. LOUIS, June 28 (AP).—The New York Giants tangled with another of those terrible Dean boys today and when the smoke cleared away the St. Louis Cardinals had won the ball game, 8 to 7 for an even split of the four-game series and Jerome Herman (Dizzy) Dean his twelfth victory of the year.

Jerome Herman was out of the game when young Bill Delancey, St. Louis catcher, smote a home run in the last half of the ninth inning, but as Jim Mooney had pitched only to one batter in the ninth, when the Giants tied the score, Dean gets the credit for the victory.

Double Victory for Dean.

It made two wins in one day for the more-famous half of the pitching Deans for he received notice just before the game that he had been awarded credit for Saturday's victory over the Brooklyn Dodgers, originally listed as a victory for Bill Hallahan.

After Schumacher had lifted a home run into the left-field stands in the third inning and two more runs had come in on three singles and a hit batsman, Ott tried to score on a bounder to Jim Collins and at first was called out. The Giants protested, claiming Delancey had dropped the ball, and, after consultation, the umpires reversed the decision and called Ott safe. Manager Frisch then protested and was sent to the showers to cool off.

Nats to Open Today With Yankees

Raising of Pennant Will Mark Start of 3-Game Series.

Weaver and Ruffing to Oppose; Sewell Must Rest for Week.

By Shirley L. Povich.
(Sports Editor of The Post.)

THE Yanks are coming. They'll be met at Griffith Stadium by all the pitching strength Manager Joe Cronin can muster during the three-game series that opens this afternoon. And, as a gentle reminder, the Nats will unfurl their 1933 pennant full in the faces of the New York Club in the pregame ceremonies.

Who's who and what's what in the pennant race this season can be established in no small degree during the three hand-to-hand skirmishes scheduled here between the league-leading Yanks and the Nats who are wallowing in fourth place, five games behind the lead.

Without moving a muscle yesterday, the Nats dropped from third to fourth place, a few percentage points behind the Red Sox who were shutting out the Indians, 6 to 0. The early afternoon rain washed out the last of the series between the Nats and Browns and deprived the women of a ladies' day invitation.

The Band Will Play.

After Goldman's Band entertains the early fans with a two-hour concert lasting until 3 o'clock, District Commissioner Melvin Hazen, accompanied by Clark Griffith and the two clubs, marching to the strains of the Army Band, will hoist the 1933 American League pennant to the center field flag pole, but there are more to the ceremonies.

Just before game time, Babe Ruth, prominent New York player, will present to Secretary of War George Dern an autographed ball and bat symbolic of the hundreds of bats and balls given by Owner Jacob Ruppert of the Yankees to citizens' military training camps throughout the Nation.

And then the players will take the field in what bears all the earmarks of a right-handed pitching duel between Monte Weaver, of the Nats, and Red Ruffing, of the Yanks. They are supposed to be the particular pitching Nemeses of both clubs.

Ruffing will return to the mound for the first time since his one-hit feat of early last week when he shut out the Indians at Yankee Stadium, yielding the only hit he permitted during the nine innings to Nick Tronsky.

Three times in six games this season the Nats have beaten the Yankees and two of those victories were scored by Monte Weaver, who still is exercising the spell he held over the Yankees last year.

Southpaws Are Groomed.

In the second and thrid games of the series, on Saturday and Sunday, Manager Cronin will fling his prize southpaws, Walter Stewart and Earl Whitehill, at the Yankees. Whitehill will be facing the Yanks for the first time since he held them hitless for 8⅔ innings on Decoration Day, the same day that saw Stewart give the Yanks only one hit after he had been poundeed for four runs in the first inning.

Despite his rapid recovery from Pitcher Irving Hadley's bean ball, Luke Sewell will not return to the Nats' line-up for a wek, and with Moe Berg nursing a shoulder injury, the bulk of the catching in the Yankee series will devolve on Eddie Phillips. Sewell was discharged from the hospital yesterday.

Cooper Defeats Armour by Shot

Springfield, Ill., June 27 (AP).—Harry Cooper, Chicago, defeated Tommy Armour by one shot for the second successive year in an 18-hole play-off today to retain his Illinois State professional golf championship.

Cooper made one of his characteristic rushes to overtake and beat his Chicago rival, scoring even par 71 for the distance to Armour's 72. After trailing from the third hole to the thirteenth, he went one shot ahead on the seventeenth as Armour's tee shot found the rough and then matched a par on the final green to win.

Red Sox Blank Tribe; Take 3d Place

Johnson Fans Eight, Grants Indians but Three Hits for 6-0 Victory.

BOSTON, June 27 (AP).—The Boston Red Sox scored their second shut-out of the season here today when they blanked Cleveland, 6 to 0, to move back into third place. Henry Johnson struck out eight Indians and gave up only three hits.

Pearson started on the mound for Cleveland, but was removed in the fourth. Lee and Bean finished.

Sox Off to Good Start.

Cissell's single, Werber's triple and Morgan's infield out scored two runs for Boston in the first. A base on balls to Morgan, Roy Johnson's single, Solters' double and Porter's single accounted for three more runs in the fourth.

Boston made its last run in the fifth on Werber's single, Morgan's and Solters' walks and Porter's infield out.

Timely Hits by Pirates Cost Phils 4-1 Defeat

Pittsburgh, June 27 (AP).—Showing the old form that made him the ace of Pirate hurlers a year ago, Larry French outpitched young Curt Davis today and Pittsburgh won from the Phillies, 4 to 1, in the last game of the series.

The southpaw star allowed but seven scattered hits, and until the eighth inning in which the Phillies counted a run, he had not been scored upon for 16 consecutive innings. French has not walked a batsman in his last 22 innings on the mound.

The Pirates hit opportunely to win. They took four of the five games played with the Phils.

Gomez Quits Under Fire In Ninth

White Sox Twice Overcome Three-Run Lead of New Yorkers.

Simmons Homers to Tie Score With Three on; No. 12 for Ruth.

NEW YORK, June 27 (AP).—A home run by Ben Chapman in the eleventh inning, with no one on base, and two and a third innings of fine relief pitching, by Johnny Murphy, today gave the New York Yankees an 8-to-7 victory over the Chicago White Sox, to strengthen their hold in first place in the American League.

The victory was their fifth straight, their fourth over Chicago and gave them a half game margin over the idle Detroit Tigers.

Vernon (Lefty) Gomez, the Yankee's ace lefthander, started the game seeking his thirteenth pitching triumph of the season, but he retired in the face of a White Sox rally in the ninth inning with the tying run on second base.

Sox Tie in Ninth.

Murphy stepped in and although big Zeke Bonura touched him for a single to drive in the tying run and send the game into extra innings he held the Sox in check the rest of the way. There was one out in the eleventh when Chapman blasted one of Johnny Heving's offerings far into the lower reaches of the leftfield stands to brea up the game. Heving had come into the game in the ninth when Milt Gaston retired for a pinch hitter.

The Yankees previously had filled the bases in the last half of the ninth with two out but Manager Joe McCarthy chose to let Murphy take his cut at the ball and he struck out.

Golden Measure, 7-1 Shot, Takes Charles Town Feature Race by Two Lengths

Daily Double Pays $238 Mutuel

Bonnie Laddie Paired With Small Change in Big Pay-off.

By Walter Haight,
(Post Staff Correspondent).

CHARLES TOWN, W. Va., June 27.—Golden Measure, a 3-year-old daughter of the once fashionable Sir Barton, has had a habit of running to the outside fence on the curves and this fact has ktpt her from figuring in the pay-offs on several races here in the mountains. There has been no doubt of her speed but she just couldn t spot the opposition the many yards lost by trying to go straight.

I am not sure whether Golden Measure decided today to try the shortset way home or whether Jockey Al Gaither had the strength to keep er on an even keel around the bends, but the fact remains that she hugged the rail all the way. At the finish of the 6½ furlong contest, Golden Measure was declared the winner by a two-length margin over Pergola with a fast-charging Pro Bono third.

Golden Measure's running-out complex was well known among the betters which accounts for the mutuel of $14.40 proportions.

Gaither gave Golden Measure a shaking up as the field left the starting gate and the filly went into a battle for the lead with Golly, which was backed into favoritism at the last minute. She shook off that rival and then settled down to the run for the wire, while a majority of those present wondered at which curve Golden Measure would run to the outside fence.

She took the bends like a taxi but developed a meanace in Pergola, which had shuffled through the leadind pack and now had only Golden Measure to catch. Palumbo went to the whip on Pergola but Gaither was awake. He managed to find some new speed in the filly and Pergola's gaining ended. Had the race been a half-furlong farther, Pro Bono would have been the winner. This fellow trailed the field along the backstretch and then finished like an express train.

The daily double paid a $38.30 mutuel when Bonnie Laddie and Small Change won in the first and third races. This pay-off was much better than a parley on the pair which paid $19.80 and $13.80 respectively.

Celanese Nine Names Ritsky New Manager

Cumberland, Md., June 27 (Spl.). Appointment of William Ritsky, playing his first season at third base for Celanese Athletic Association, as manager of the Silkmen for the remainder of the Inter-State League season, was announced.

Ritsky succeeds Wilmoth Garlitz. who piloted the Celanese team last season. Garlitz tried to resign his post shortly before the present campaign opened, claiming he could not devote sufficient time to the work, but was persuaded to continue. He gave a lack of time as his reason for giving up the reins.

Acquisition of the services of Eddie Diehl, shortstop, and Van Roby, outfielder, formerly of the Cumberland Colts of the Cumberland and Georges Creek League, was announced last night by the Corriganville Hustlers of the Inter-State League. Diehl is hitting the ball around the .400 mark and Roby's average is .360.

with Bill Bennings.

Dear Al: Charles Town, June 27.

For the first time since the meeting began on May 28, Bennings, Inc., was shut out today. We had them close and all that, but not once was the number of the once proud mutuel-wrecking firm on display in the top position on the mutuel board. Only one of our seven top horses was out of the money, but they were not there as far as the main pay-off was concerned. Clocker Mike tried his best to chase Sand Bell home in the final. He went down by the stable lunchroom in an effort to root my choice to the wire, but the best the horse could do was third. I wouldn't say Mike was a jinx, but I did chase him out of the office tonight as I attacked the speed books.

BILL.

First race—Linnie scored for the Bennings interest last out and I'm going right back. Hurdy Gurdy shapes up as the one to best. Disruption to take care of the others.

Second race—Flageolet has a good chance of getting to the wire in time to collect the main end of this purse. Must have a better ride than last one, however. Giggley Ann's last was a beaut. Clocker Mike says Zrombro is ready to beat this kind.

Third race—Rustic Cuba has a habit of awaking in fields of this caliber. Reported to be fit. Jobs Dido must be respected. War General has improved and may place higher.

Fourth race—Ada Wan can step on the gas when well meant and I see no reason for the stable to try to duck this purse. Holland appears ready to make the filly step throughout the running. Dutiful for the show end.

Fifth race—I'm going to give Dunair another chance in this cheap field. Grand Rox and Forest Faun should go well, but if the top one is in a running mood it will be all over except the pay-off.

Sixth race—This Play appears to have an edge over the opposition offered here. Likes the route and any mutuel will be a good one. Post Brigade may awake to be the chief contender. The hard-worked Consummation for the show.

Seventh race—No Mistake brought us a winner early in the meeting. Meets a fair field tomorrow and with the aid of Clocker Mike, I'm going to try to chase this one home. Helen's Alibi and Hosain for the other awards.

jury to Col. Earl Combs yesterday, did very well for himself before retiring for a pinch runner in the seventh. He walked in the first, hit his twelfth homer of the year in the second, doubled in the fifth and singled in the seventh to drive in what would have been the winning run but for the Sox in the ninth.

Al Simmons also hit his twelfth home run for the Sox in the fourth with the bases loaded to tie up the game the first time.

Smith-Laffoon Horses Win Again at Latonia

Latonia, Ky., June 27 (AP).—The colors of Racing Commissioners William E. Smith and Polk Laffoon again were conspicuous here this afternoon when two claiming events, one styled the Fort Mitchell Country Club Purse and the other the Cynthia Purse, featured the card and Mr. Smith's Left Wing accounted for the former and Mr. Laffoon's Shepherd Boy the latter.

Left Wing came from far back through the stretch run of the 6-furlong Fort Mitchell to defeat Smear, the favorite, by a head.

Morsun Wins Second Victory at Detroit

Detroit, June 7 (AP).—Morsun, carrying the colors of the Lone Star Stable, won his second consecutive victory today, taking command when he got ready and beating out Muslet by more than a length in the fifth race at the Fair Grounds track.

Morsun was the first favorite of the afternoon to score, but paid the fair price of $6.20. Timorous was third.

Mary won the first race, paying $10. Betty Wee captured the second, rewarding holders of $2 straight tickets with $8.20. Dark Dianne paid the nice price of $12.60 in winning the third event while Burgoo, a field horse, beat out such contestants as Princeton, the favorite, Two Tricks and Volwood to take the fourth. Straight tickets were worth $17.60.

Virginia Golf Win for Mrs. Harper

Mrs. George Routed, 6 and 4, in Women's Title Tourney.

CAVALIER Country Club, Virginia Beach, Va., June 27 (AP).—One tournament favorite fell today in the first round of match play of the women's State golf championship but little Lily Harper, the 100-pound Portsmouth star, justified pre-tournament predictions with a sensational 6 and 4 victory over Mrs. Frank George, of Norfolk.

Miss Harper's drives were straight and long and her putts were falling but it was her remarkable iron shots that finally turned the Portsmouth girl's match with Mrs. George into a rout.

While Lily was closing out the match with her Norfolk opponent on the fourteenth green, Mrs. C. S. Quisenberry, of Charlottesville, playing an outstanding game and taking advantage of her opponent's lapses, defeated Mrs. H. C. Kersten, of Richmond, the 1931 champion, two and one.

Mrs. Kersten Off Form.

Mrs. Kersten, who hardly seemed the same player who shot a brilliant 80 to tie Miss Harper for the qualifying medal yesterday, was all even with her Charlottesville foe at the turn. They were also even at the thirteenth, but Mrs. Quisenberry won the 14th and 15th and was never headed.

Meanwhile, Miss Rita Main, of Danville, a sturdy lass whose drives zoomed far down the narrow fairways, was carried to the nineteenth green by Mrs. J. Thomas Priddy, of Richmond, the 1930 champion.

The Danville star, outdriving her opponent consistently, saw her tee shot advantage nullified by a disappointing short game. They were all even after the eighteenth hole, but Rita finished out the match with a par 4 on the extra hole. She was on the green in 2 and holed out with two putts, while Mrs. Priddy needed four to reach the green.

In contrast with the spotty golf played by some of the favorites, Miss Harper's game was at its best. Especially was this true of the first nine holes, which she finished in 38, only 4 above men's par.

Mrs. Owens Is Upset.

In other matches Mrs. W. R. Graham, of Richmond, shooting 85 medal score, defeated the favored Mrs. G. M. Owens, of Wessels Petersburg, 3 and 3; Miss Martha Martin, of Richmond, defeated Mrs. J. A. Sloan, of Richmond, 3 and 1; Mrs. C. B. Walden, of Richmond, eliminated Mrs. W. B. Jones, of Norfolk, 7 and 6, and Mrs. George Schenck, of Norfolk, whipped Miss Lillian Wood, of Richmond, 7 and 6.

Mrs. Neil Wessels, of Roanoke, affected by the intense heat, defaulted to Mrs. R. C. Welton, of Richmond, on the twelfth green. Mrs. Welton was 2 up at the time.

Miss Harper will meet Mrs. Graham in tomorrow's second round, Mrs. Main will play Miss Martin, Mrs. Quisenberry will match shots with Mrs. Welton and Mrs. Walden will oppose Mrs. Schenck.

Twentieth Century Plans to Employ Legitimate Theater as Screen Laboratory

Darryl Zanuck To Back Plays Fit for Films

"The Red Cat" to Be First; "Barn" Theaters Busy; Amusement Notes.

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

By Nelson B. Bell.

Having achieved an enviable record during its first year of active production—"The House of Rothschild"—starring George Arliss, was its first anniversary release—Twentieth Century Pictures, Inc., plans a new method of procedure for its second year.

It is announced as the purpose of Twentieth Century to adopt the policy of employing the legitimate stage as a laboratory for screen presentations.

The first of its productions to receive the benefit of a stage tryout will be "The Red Cat," the Rudolph Lothar-Hans Adler play, to be produced under the aegis of Al H. Woods. It is soon to be put into rehearsal. A number of other plays, presented under a similar arrangement between other legitimate producers and Twentieth Century, are to be announced in the near future.

Darryl F. Zanuck, production head of the film company, releasing through United Artists, will return in August from an African hunting trip in time to see the stage production of "The Red Cat." Maybe he will have shot one! It is reported that he will base his selection for the screen cast on the characterizations revealed by the play.

Not New Scheme.

The precise articles of agreement between Twentieth Century and the producers of living drama in the traditional theater are not known to this column, but there is a strong resemblance in its evident scheme of procedure to like enterprises that were undertaken a few seasons ago by both Warner Brothers and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

The Warner Brothers backed a stage play or two or three that subsequently were converted into screen dramas and it is by no means longer a secret that M.-G.-M. were the backers of the stage version of "Grand Hotel," as well as makers of the superlative picture that followed and engaged the talents of practically all the stars on the lot.

Come to think of it, I would not be certain that it was not while Mr. Zanuck was a production head for Warner Brothers that they pursued the policy which Mr. Zanuck now plans to put into effect for Twentieth Century.

In fact, I think it was.

Walt Disney's celebrated animated cartoon character that started the whole world singing "Who's Afraid of the Big, Bad Wolf?" will return to the local screen as a full-fledged star in "The Big, Bad Wolf," to be shown at Loew's Palace beginning Friday, as a supplementary feature on the program of which the major item will be the film version of Dashiel Hammett's story of "The Thin Man," costarring William Powell and Myrna Loy.

"The Big, Bad Wolf" is the first sequel ever to come from the facile pens of the Disney studios. It is based on the story of "Little Red Riding Hood"—as if you didn't already know.

And don't tell me you never saw "Three Little Pigs" that started the whole business!

"Barn" Theaters Active.

With our local Roadside Theater and Playbox Theater both in succesful operation and exercising something of the function of the "barn" theater as it is known throughout New York State and New England, it is interesting to note of just what importance this rural theatrical activity has come to be.

A survey of the present week indicates that nine plays are listed for presentation by rural theater groups in and around New York.

These, one learns from the helpful columns of the New York Herald Tribune and other reliable sources of information, include "True to the Marines," at the Red Barn Theater, Locust Valley, Long Island; "The Good Girl," Westchester Theater, New Rochelle, N. Y.; "Gram," Elverhoj Theater, Milton-on-Hudson; "Round Trip," County Theater, Suffern, N. Y.; "Winesberg, Ohio," Hedgerow Theater, Rose Valley, Pa., the modest institution in which Ann Harding received her professional start and in which she plays at least one week every year; "All These Years," Cliff Theater, Sea Cliff, Long Island; "Chimes of Corneville," County Playhouse, Westport, Conn., and "Like Father," Schroon Lake, N. Y.

Out of all this doubtless will come something that will be seen locally as a touring road attraction next season—just as "Double Door" came along last season following an identical genesis.

Welcome callers at the dramatic desk yesterday: Harold K. Phillips, Washington representative of the Will H. Hays office—meaning the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc.—who brought us the two latest brochures off the organizations presses, and, last evening Robert Pitkin, famous musical comedy, light opera and revue comedian, who dropped by for corroboration of some of the tragic details of the untimely death of his friend, Hal Skelly, who was killed in a railroad crossing accident up in New York State on June 16.

"Bob" Pitkin's last appearance on a Washington stage was in the Shubert production of Gilbert and Sullivan's "The Mikado," starring Mme. Ernestine Schumann-Heink at the Belasco Theater two seasons ago. Mr. Pitkin was the Ko-Ko, Lord High Executioner, of the cast.

Going farther back than that, he was a member of the stage unit that played the Palace Theater the week that Jean Harlow appeared there in person, two years ago last April 1. Don Barclay was star of the unit and Bert Frohman was brought on especially to act as master of ceremonies and "straight man" for the platinum Miss Harlow.

"Ga-Ga-Ga-Ga-Ga!"

Bert Lahr, stage, screen and radio comedian, who has been visible most recently in some of the Meyer Davis short-reel screen subjects presented at RKO-Keith's—the last one, I believe, was "Henry, the Ache"—has been engaged for "Life Begins at 8:40." This would be the much talked-of revue in which Ira Gershwin, Dave Freedman, E. Y. Harburg and Harold Arlen, composer of "Stormy Weather," have pooled their creative talents. John Murray Anderson, the man who pulled the Shubert version of the "Ziegfeld Follies" out of the fire and made it into a Broadway hit of moderate dimensions, will stage the production, which goes into rehearsal shortly.

Ray Bolger, who recently headed a tabloid stage revue at Loew's Fox—that was the time the baggage got in late on the coldest day of the winter and the show was something like two hours late in getting under way—and Luella Gear are the other principals so far engaged.

Harking back to the Will H. Hays office momentarily, one is surprised to learn from a letter that came to hand yesterday that the executive assistant to the president of the MPPDA is one Maurice McKenzie, a former resident of our native Valparaiso, Ind., who learned his shorthand from old friends, knows all of our old side-kicks and still corresponds with several of them.

It's a small world, after all, is what I always say.

A Second Look.

In viewing a portion of "Hollywood Party," at Loew's Fox a second time, it seemed more than ever one of the goofiest conglomerations ever put on a screen, and yet to possess certain qualities of cleverness that have seldom been equaled.

One of the most surprising revelations in the picture is that Polly Moran can do a remarkably good job of singing "I've Had My Moment," the song hit of the film—provided she did sing it and the voice wasn't "dubbed in" just for a joke—and one of its keen disappointments that Oliver Hardy wasn't given a song. Hardy does a better than average bit of roundelaying as a balladist.

There is a tremendous amount of mass movement in the action of the ensembles that must have been extremely difficult to direct and most of it is photographed from the craziest angles the cameramen could think up. And that wasn't bizarre enough, so they hitched their scenes together with skyrockets!

And that isn't all!

I still would like to know who ever told Lupe Velez that that expository contraption she wears through almost the entire picture is a gown!

Reprieve Note.

There is balm in Gilead, or something. No broadcast today, hence no need to get up in the middle of the night to reach WJSV in time for it at 11:45 a. m.

Oh, boy; oh, boy; oh, boy!

Coming to Next Week's Screens

Appearing opposite James Cagney in "He Was Her Man," at the Metropolitan next week, beginning Friday, is Joan Blondell, the versatile blonde shown above at left. Mr. Cagney and Miss Blondell made their advent in Hollywood simultaneously. At the right, above, is Patricia Ellis, one of the younger beauties of the cinema, who is cast opposite Joe E. Brown in "The Circus Clown," next week's feature film at the Earle, also opening on Friday.

Clark Gable Is Wanted to "Go English" in Oxford Film; Death Claims Mrs. Victor Moore, Noted Comedienne; Garbo, Hepburn, Stone, et al.

By Edwin Schallert.

Hollywood, June 26—Wouldn't it be a surprise if Clark Gable should suddenly become very, very English? It would be a far cry, or some such like, from "The Last Mile," in which Hollywood first became strikingly acquainted with his talents.

GRETA GARBO.

However, there is now the possibility lurking on the horizon that he will be seen in "Manners Maketh the Man," the John Monk Saunders feature having to do with Oxford—a real story of life at the famous British university. In it he is likely to be an American who experiences the Anglicizing influences of the great institution.

The picture has been germinating for some time under the supervision of John Considine, who is an Oxford graduate, as is Saunders. It is known that Gable is very much wanted for the principal role.

Death Recalls Memoirs.

Victor Moore, who appeared as the Vice President of the United States in "Of Thee I Sing," the famous musical satire, heard the sad news of his wife's death en route to the East. He had taken a plane to be at her bedside, but she passed away before he could reach New York.

Mrs. Moore was known professionally as Emma Littlefield, and for many years appeared in vaudeville with her husband as the team of Moore and Littlefield in their act, "Change Your Act or Back to the Woods." It was a great favorite.

Moore has been working at Universal and was doing one of the final scenes in the picture when the first serious news arrived. He was told that his wife was not expected to recover. And it was a comedy scene he had to play.

• • • •

Greta Aids Adrian.

Greta Garbo is becoming surprisingly accommodating. She arrived at the studio two weeks ahead of time for fittings to be used in "The Painted Veil," in order to convenience Adrian, the fashion designer, who has just gone on a vacation to Santa Fe, N. Mex.

Adrian was very anxious to leave at this time, and Greta, learning of this, came out of hiding, and had everything done that was required about the costuming of the Somerset Maugham story.

• • • •

Health On the Mend.

Loretta Young is rapidly convalescing, and will return home Tuesday. She was in the cast of "Hide-Out" for a time, but had to abandon that role, and now her next picture will be "Forsaking All Others," from the New York stage play. She will start on this when completely well.

• • • •

Hepburn May Rival Garbo.

Katharine Hepburn and Greta Garbo may be looking daggers at each other if all these rumors of their both playing the role of George Sand, the famous writer, mean anything. They probably don't. But it looks as if, sooner or later, Miss Hepburn will be rivaling Garbo by appearing as some sort of artistic personage. Garbo did that, you know, in "Romance."

The facts are that Hepburn may appear in a story based on the life of Ethel Leginska, the pianiste. It is understood that Victor Wittgenstein, who recently arrived here, and who is a musician as well as writer, is working on this. It's probable that when the character is finally presented it will, however, be completely dissociated from the original.

Hepburn at present faces on schedule "The Little Minister," "Forsyte Saga" and "Joan of Arc." But then, plans may change.

• • • •

Picture Pageant Now Passing.

"The Mystery of Edwin Drood" is shaping up, and it's fairly certain that Frank Lawton will be seen in this picture whensoever it is produced.

Ramon Novarro is giving a concert in Rio de Janeiro to wind up his South American tour, and will return to Hollywood late in the summer to start on "Her Excellency's Tobacco Shop," with Evelyn Laye.

Lew Stone has left on his yacht for destination unknown; he will be gone a week.

Blanche Sweet is studying in the East for radio work.

The Federal Diary

By Morgan Baker
(Trade-mark Applied For).

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

This is Rhode Island Day in the Federal Diary's Parade of the States. Gigantic New York will pass in review Friday and the parade will close Sunday with Virginia.

Salute to Rhode Island.

Not for vast size or sunny skies
Is this State widely noted;
Nor for fine grains or rolling plains
Or mountains, snowy coated;
Yet this State's name is crowned with fame
Throughout the entire Nation
For on the sea Newport can't be Surpassed for a vacation.
Here, too, we find most every kind
Of cotton mill and shipping,
And it is due to jewelry, too,
That her cup's filled to dripping.
So to this State, ranked with the great,
Let's drain our crystal glasses
And stand and cheer both loud and clear
As "Little Rhody" passes!

RHODE ISLAND, the smallest State in the Union, was settled in 1636 by Roger Williams, who was banished from Massachusetts because of his religious and political views. On May 4, 1776, this independent little colony broke with England, and in July of that year adopted the name "The State of Rhode Island and Providence Plantations."

BAKER.

Following the name of Roger Williams, Rhode Island has given the world such famous people as Nathanael Greene, Oliver H. Perry, Ambrose Burnside, Gilbert Stuart, E. Hopkins, Robert Gray, Samuel Slater and Thomas A. Jenckes, who was father of the civil service act.

The eighteenth century was a commercial era, but the nineteenth century ushered in an industrial epoch. Here in this little State is made some product used in the manufacture of every article of merchandise in America. Among the leading Rhode Island products are:

Straw braid for hats, first made in Rhode Island; Rhode Island leads the Nation in jewelry manufacture—a Providence factory makes more rings than any other American factory; another leads in making watch bracelets. The largest manufacturer of sterling silverware in the world is in the State. One of the largest machine shops in the world is in Providence.

The first cotton mill in America was established in Rhode Island. The State still is a leader in textiles, having some of the world's largest mills.

Rhode Island has two distinct types of agricultural lands; the low hills and glacial plains of the east, which are exceptionally fertile, and the inland hilly area of the west. Here on these farms dairying and poultry raising are extensively followed.

The State early looked to the best education for their children.

Brown University, noted for its many famous alumni, has been closely linked with the State's history. Charles Evans Hughes, Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court, is a Brown graduate. The university has an enrollment of more than 1,500, including about 400 women of Pembroke College.

Rhode Island State College, at Kingston, has had a very important part in all matters affecting the agricultural interests of the State. It has a splendid R. O. T. C. unit.

The Rhode Island College of Education, Providence, is known throughout the State as "The Old Normal School," is one of the finest of its kind in the country.

Providence College, although founded only 10 years ago by the Catholics, already has an enrollment of more than 800 students and has an enviable scholastic standing.

THE climate of Rhode Island, while variable, is most agreeable in both winter and summer. Because of this and the fact that it has 400 miles of tide washed shores, many have found it an ideal vacation land. Boating, fishing, swimming, riding and other recreation abound for thousands of residents and tourists. Rhode Island boasts one of the finest highway systems in America. Its roads are wide and paved.

Although the smallest State in the Union, Rhode Islanders vigorously point out that "they can get around without stumbling over one another." They have plenty of room for farms, cities, vacation resorts and factories. The State, with 1,248 square miles, is 20 times larger than the District of Columbia. It ranks thirty-seventh in population (687,497 in 1930).

The State motto is "Hope." The State flower is the violet. Providence, the capital, can boast of being situated on lands honestly bought from the Indians. For a long time the State was unique in having two capitals, Newport being the other.

Active State Society.

Perhaps the most outstanding work accomplished by the Rhode Island State Society was securing the amendment to the State Constitution whereby all Rhode Islanders unable to be present on election day are now permitted to vote by mail. From the very moment of its inception the society worked long and assiduously for the above end. It was not, however, until the early spring of 1932 that the State Legislature passed the enabling legislation carrying into effect the aforesaid amendment, and thus it was that the last Presidential election was the first in which absentee voting was permitted. Of course, prior to that time men in the military service, during time of war, were permitted thus to vote. If the society had done nothing else but that, it would have been enough to have justified its existence. Among those taking a prominent part in securing the passage of the above legislation were the the then president, William J. Crane; Edward M. Flanagan, vice president; Charles R. Stark, chairman of the committee in charge of the matter, and Mrs. Irene (Gladding) Lyddane.

The annual affairs usually consist of a dance held in January or February, and the clam-bake, the latter easily the most enjoyable of any of the meetings of the society. The clam-bake held last Saturday was one of the most successful and enjoyable of all the affairs ever held. This latter success was due primarily to Jack Palmer and Theodore Hicks, the master and assistant master of the bake. They worked untiringly to supplement the splendid work of the committee in charge of it, consisting of Chairman William B. Child, Secretary Mrs. Ada M. Riley, Miss Helen Cullinan, George Tormey, Miss Grace Allen, Mrs. Arthur Donnelly, Joseph Roney and Mrs. John Quinn.

The executive committee of the society consists of the following: William J. Connors, former Providence College football star; George H. Crane, George McAlear, a veteran of the Postoffice Department, and Miss Lena King, of Pawtucket, who is aiding Gen. Johnson at the NRA.

Former Rhode Islanders.

Other former Rhode Islanders are also well remembered by their friends here, particularly Federal Judge Ira Letts, now Federal judge in Providence and for the District of Rhode Island; former Assistant Attorney General Charles P. Sisson, former Brown football star, and Claude R. Branch, now of Boston and formerly with the Solicitor General's Office, Department of Justice.

One of the finest "seabirds" in local waters is Senator Jesse Metcalf's famous yacht, the Sylph.

One of the best known musical organizations in the city and back in Rhode Island is Senator Felix Hebert's famous "Children's Orchestra," which has played at the White House, among other functions. As is well known, this orchestra is composed of his children, who have received very extensive musical education.

Mr. Crane served with the Twenty-eighth Infantry, First Division, during the World War, joining the division at Verdun. He marched with the A. E. F. to the Rhine and was discharged in 1919. Mr. Crane has been a political leader in Rhode Island. He also assisted in the repeal vote in Virginia.

John Palmer, assistant chief of disbursing office, AAA, is a capable leader. He has had immediate charge of the issuance of thousands and thousands of checks to farmers under the AAA. Mr. Palmer was one of the most successful and enjoyable of all the affairs ever held. This latter success was due primarily to Jack Palmer and Theodore Hicks, the master and assistant master of the bake. They worked untiringly to supplement the splendid work of the committee in charge of it, consisting of Chairman William B. Child, Secretary Mrs. Ada M. Post Staff and Harris & Ewing Photos

These two typical young Rhode Islanders in Government service keep close contact with their home State. Miss Grace Louise Allen, of Woonsocket, is with Life Insurance Claims Division, Veterans' Administration. George Bernard Tormey, of Central Falls, a graduate of St. Raphael Academy, is with PWA.

Mrs. Longfellow for many years has been a leader in life saving activities of the American Red Cross. He has traveled over America on errands of mercy and has lectured before Y. M. C. A. groups, Boy Scouts, industrialists and others who are interested in life saving.

During the World War Davis G. Arnold, of Providence, was a major in the A. E. F. with a cavalry outfit. Mr. Arnold is now an attorney in Guardianship Division, Veterans' Administration.

Cyril A. Costello (*), of Providence, is one of the very few men to take a course in "boyology," in connection with the newsboy problems in the Newspaper Code Section of NRA. Mr. Costello is an expert on juvenile problems and has traveled three years for the Knights of Columbus.

A fearless, capable and high-grade detective is Sergt. John Dalgish, of the Homicide Squad, Metropolitan Police. Sergt. Dalgish is from Jamestown. He had a very progressive career before and during the World War when he was in the Army.

Author of the Rhode Island merchants and the sugar acts and a leading attorney of Providence, Frederick Bernays Wiener is now an attorney examiner at PWA. Brown and Harvard are Mr. Wiener's schools.

Before coming to Washington as secretary to Representative John M. O'Connell, James M. McGarry (*), of Providence, was an attorney.

The Buresu of Prisons has a splendid statistical division that is recognized throughout the world. One of the organizers of this division was a Rhode Islander, George H. Crane, who is still with the bureau, Justice. Mr. Crane served in an engineering outfit during the World War.

Arthur Donnelly, examiner at Patent Office, and Mrs. Donnelly are most active in the Rhode Island State Society. This charming Providence couple are very popular here.

Interesting Rhode Islanders.

Saving lives is the career of Wilbert E. Longfellow, of Providence. Mrs. Riley is a widow and the mother of three fine children, Laura Treadwell, William Clinton and Donald Calvin.

Mrs. Riley is active also in veterans welfare groups, being historian of George E. Killeen unit of the American Legion Auxiliary, a member of the Leonard Wood unit, American Woman's Legion. Mrs. Riley has been official hostess for Walter Reed Masonic Club dances, and is active in Iona Chapter, Order of Eastern Star.

DUAL-HEAT CURING
An Important Factor in Tire Building

UNIFORM CURING FOR UNIFORM WEAR

No part of the tire under-cured—no part over-cured—Dual-heat curing process provides long, safe mileage in Miller De Luxe Geared-to-the-Road Tires. Uniform heat both inside and outside the tire vulcanizes every part thoroughly . . . reduces danger of internal separation, assures long, even wear, gives long safe mileage. Let us demonstrate what this means in safety and tire economy.

Bonnie Parker.

When last I talked with lovely Bonnie, it was to scold her and to chide: "You ought to dump that Barrow johnnie, and cease to be the bandit's bride. The reckless sort of life you're leading will bring you to an early grave; the law behind you ever speeding, you don't have time to buy a shave. There is no profit and no honor in training with an outlaw crowd, and when at last you are a goner you'll lack the price to buy a shroud. Far better wed an honest plumber, whose wage is certain, though it's small, and give him long, cool drinks in summer, and Hubbard squashes in the fall. Far better wed the village grocer, and lead a tranquil life and calm, and see the sheriff drawing closer without a tremor or a qualm. Already charged with stealing pullets, and tinkering with slot machines, some day you'll stop a flock of bullets while being chased by horse marines." She placed her feet upon my table, she smoked a large and black cigar, and said she thought that she was able to give the law a nasty jar. She laughed to scorn my admonition, she would not heed my sage advice, and now, in battered-up condition, they've placed dear Bonnie on the ice. I am ashamed to spring the moral, it's so bewhiskered, old and gray; in letters purple, gold and sorrel, we've seen it framed, "Crime doesn't pay."

Stocks Drift Lower After Rally Attempts

Market Dips Three-tenths as Transfers Rise to 628,890 Shares.

New York, June 27 (AP).—The stock market resumed its aimless drifting course today after rallying tendencies had met a check in early trading.

Financial markets were pervaded by an undertone of firmness, but speculative interests clung to a waiting attitude.

Metal, sugar and packing shares provided some of the outstanding gains of the slow-moving session. Buying in those groups was motivated chiefly by prospect of profits from inventory appreciation. Transfers on the stock exchange totaled 628,890 shares.

Eyes Turn to Capital.

Eyes were turned to Washington for news which might break the stalemate. Names of two or three possible candidates for the Federal Stock Exchange Commission have been mentioned so frequently the past two days, Wall street assumed there must be some fire where there was so much smoke. However, most traders preferred to remain inactive while waiting for something to stir public interest in stocks and for overhanging developments, including President Roosevelt's address to the country tomorrow, to pass.

The market turned irregular after yesterday's rally had carried into early trading. The Standard Statistics Co. average for 90 stocks, mostly active issues, dipped three-tenths of a point to 78.8, although gains outnumbered losses in the share list.

Advances ranged from fractions to more than 2 points among Armour of Illinois preferred, Wilson preferred, Cuban-American Sugar preferred, Cerro de Pasco, U. S. Smelting, Dome Mines, International Silver, American Metals, American Telephone and American Bank Note.

A few relatively inactive issues scored wide gains. Homestake Mining, leading domestic gold stock, added nearly 10 points to its previous advance as it hit 410, a new peak. G. W. Helme jumped 7½ points to a new top. A further gain of 2½ points carried Santa Fe preferred to a new high. People's Drug spurted 4 points to touch a 1934 peak.

U. S. Steel common, American Can, General Motors, Du Pont, Chrysler and other old-time industrial leaders sagged fractionally as professional speculative play turned to the selling side. Rails were mixed, Pennsylvania gaining a small fraction as directors declared a dividend of 50 cents on the common, the second payment of that amount this year.

German Mark Rallies.

A further rally in the German mark, despite the fact German gold reserves have almost reached the vanishing point, contrasted with a somewhat easier tone in most European currencies against the dollar.

Steel shares were no weaker than the performance of the market generally warranted, despite prediction of a further decline in operations. Iron Age, in its weekly review, found the recent relatively high level of steel output had been maintained artificially by a sprint to complete second-quarter contracts, as required by the steel code, and estimated current output at 48 per cent of capacity against 60 per cent a week ago.

Electric Power figures and individual carloading reports indicated business as a whole had maintained a fairly steady pace last week. Power use increased a little, but the margin gain over 1933 narrowed to 4.8 per cent from 5.5 the preceding week.

Goods Markets.

New York, June 27 (A.P.).—Cotton goods were firm today with trading quiet in the gray goods division, and filling in lots being bought in finished goods lines.

Wool goods traders are buying very little until after the week-end which closes the fiscal year. Resistance to high wool prices continues.

The protracted hearings on rayon by the Federal Trade Commission were continued until September. The trade is expecting an early decision from Washington on the compensatory tax on rayons which has been under consideration for months as part of the cotton processor tax.

Silk goods in the higher priced qualities are attracting more attention than for some seasons past and a better fall business in them is predicted. Burlaps were quiet with trading light.

Robey's Review

Finance Economics Business

Plan of National Planning Commission Follows President's Ideas Sufficiently Closely to Make Its Adoption Possible.

By Ralph West Robey.

Reports that the President is "highly pleased" with the preliminary program of the National Planning Commission means little so far as the ultimate outcome is concerned. From the dispatches, however, it appears that the commission is working along a line so closely parallel to the President's trend of thought that final approval is almost certain. In this case it is not too early to begin to think of the plan. For it far exceeds anything we yet have had in the way of reducing our future development to a blueprint.

It is a plan, in brief, for directing the course of growth of virtually the entire economic system. As explained in one account it involves "the removal of marginal farm lands from production as better farm land is reclaimed, the shifting of population to better the conditions of those on a sub-standard scale of living, the introduction of the combination occupation of part-time farming and part-time industrial work, the control in the public interest of the power and other products of water developments, and the division of responsibility over these projects among Federal, State and local governments."

Would Increase Permanent Budget About One-Eighth.

The estimated cost is placed at between $400,000,000 and $500,000,000 a year. This is not, it should be emphasized, the cost for the entire plan, but the cost for each year—a cost that will continue year after year, that will become a regular part of the Federal budget.

As compared with the amount that we today are spending in relief and in ways to lift ourselves from the depression, such an amount appears small. In the case of the relief and depression expenditures, however, it has been the assumption that we were dealing with a temporary burden. Should the plan discussed by this commission be put in effect, the cost would not have any such temporary aspect.

It would mean, in a word, an increase of taxes sufficient to cover the outlay, for needless to say the Government can not continue indefinitely borrowing money. To raise such an amount of money over and above the amount now collected by the Federal Government, taxes would have to be increased on the average some 10 to 15 per cent over the present level.

Cost Only One Factor In Making a Decision.

In the final analysis, nevertheless, it should not be merely such considerations of cost that should determine whether the plan is adopted. The real basis for the decision should be whether such a plan has any chance of conferring lasting benefits upon the American public as a whole; whether we have men capable of blueprinting the future development for a country containing 130,000,000 people.

The answer to such questions, of course, is in the negative. We have plenty of people that are capable of daydreaming about what should be done, and plenty of people that think it is foolish to say that such a plan is not possible, but we do not have anyone or any group of individuals that has the intellectual capacity of grasping all of the complications entering an economic system such as ours. This is true, and it has been amply demonstrated from Washington in the last year, when one limits the problem to immediate factors. How much more it must be true, if the planners have to consider not only immediate factors, but the developments for 50 years in the future.

When we seriously consider such plans as that apparently being offered by the National Planning Commission, accordingly, we no longer are dealing with realities. We simply are returning to sophmoric enthusiasms for utopians.

Bond Market Holds Steady; Up One-Tenth

Prime Investment Issues at New Highs; Sales, $9,431,000.

New York, June 27 (AP).—The bond market was quiet, but relatively steady today, and fractional price changes ruled throughout the session.

Transfers totaled $9,431,000, par value, against $10,785,000 yesterday, and the Standard Statistics Co. average for 60 domestic corporate loans edged up one-tenth of a point to 86.4.

With numerous prime investment issues around their best levels for the past year or more, the buying appetite in these high-grade groups was not particularly sharp, although a few of the "gilt edges" managed to advance into new territory with small fractional gains and equally restricted turnovers.

Among New Highs.

Among bonds that reached new 1934 tops were Brooklyn Gas 5s of 1945, Chile Copper 5s, Burlington 4s, Morris & Co. 4½s, New Jersey Power 4½s and Northern Pacific prior lien 4s.

Higher prices were recorded by some loans of Warner Bros., Wabash, Utilities Power & Light, U. S. Rubber, United Drug, Union Pacific, Skelly Oil, Shell Pipe Line, Republic Steel, Postal Telegraph, Philadelphia Reading Coal & Iron, Philadelphia-Reading Coal & Iron, Power, North American Edison, Pennsylvania Railroad, N. Y. Central, M-K-T, Louisville & Nashville, Fort Scott, International Telephone, International Hydro-Electric, Interborough Rapid-Transit, Illinois Central, Hudson & Manhattan, Goodyear, Erie, Rock Island, Armour & Co., American Writing Paper and American Rolling Mill.

Declines of fractions to around a point or so were suffered by some issues of Central of Georgia, Chesapeake & Ohio, Chesapeake Corp., Chicago Indianapolis & Louisville, St. Paul, Chicago & Northwestern, Cuba Northern, Denver & Rio Grande, Laclede Gas, Southern Pacific and Warren Bros.

Only about $1,200,000 of U. S. Government securities changed hands, but the majority held minor gains. Treasury 3¼s of 1944-46 recorded a new high with an advance of 4-32ds of a point.

Foreign obligations were irregular. German Government 5½s and 7s sagged, as did issues of Rhine Westphalia. Improvement was shown by loans of Argentina, Haiti and Sao Paulo.

Curb Leaders Score Gains in Active Session

Speculative Dealing Widens as Sales Mount to 174,000 Shares.

New York, June 27 (AP).—Leading curb exchange stocks made substantial advances in the most active session in several weeks today. Oil stocks and industrials seemed to be favored by traders and many of them improved 1 to 2 and in some instances as much as 3 points, before moderate profit taking reduced the gains just before the close. Transfers approximated 174,000 compared with 142,000 Tuesday.

The improvement in speculative sentiment, first evident in the closing hour of the previous session, was noted again at the outset of today's trading and brokers reported a substantial amount of short covering within the first two hours during which time the greatest gains were made.

Armour & Co. new preferred gained 2½ points to close at 61¼, and the common improved fractionally, although other packing shares, including two issues of Swift & Co., were virtually unchanged in a small tunover. Consolidated Mining gained 3 points, as did Pan-American Airways, and issues advancing around 2 included Central Power & Light preferred, Bunker Hill & Sullivan, Duke Power, Gulf Oil, Montgomery Ward "A," New Jersey Zinc, Pittsburgh Plate Glass, and Sherwin Williams.

Fractional to 1 point advances occurred in American Gas, Niagara Hudson Power, International Petroleum, Safety Car, Standard Oil of Indiana, and Tubize Chatillon.

Lake Shore Mines and Newmont Mining closed fractionally lower, as did Electric Band & Share and Fisk Rubber.

Trade Trends.

Commodity prices—After breaking through the high point of last year, reaching 13.68 on June 29, the Dun & Bradstreet daily weighted index of wholesale commodity prices dropped to 112.70 on June 25, as against 113.44 a week earlier. The drop was caused by reactions in grains, flour, butter, silk, rubber, lard and coffee.

Zinc—Prices have firmed in expectation of a shutdown of mines in the tri-State field during July, in accordance with the agreement of producers. Prime Western was quoted yesterday at 4.20@4.25 cents a pound, East St. Louis, against 4.20 cents earlier in the week.

Gossip of New York Markets

By G. A. Phillips.

New York, June 27 (AP).—One of the most difficult problems confronting the new Securities Exchange Commission when it begins drafting regulations governing the registration of securities will be the provisions relating to publicity of closely guarded corporate information.

The general philosophy of the securities act is admitted on all sides to be the protection of the investor, and the line of demarcation between information that is important for the investor and that which would provide the competitors of the issuing corporation with valuable information is expected by Wall street analysts to prove troublesome to the commission.

One common item that executives have balked at is furnishing detailed information on volume of sales and cost of sales, both of which they invariably claim would, if published, lay them at the mercy of competitors and work undue hardship on the company. Another point they make deals with disclosure of information concerning partially owned or fully owned subsidiaries and the intercorporate relationship between the parent company and its offspring.

Detailed information on the income account is another stumbling block that will have to be dealt with. If any of the various international corporations are paying goodly sums annually to foreign governments for their good will, the commission will have to decide whether that information is sufficiently vital to the investor to overcome the strenuous objection of the corporation executives who see in such a development international repercussions of an unpleasant nature.

The securities control law allows theory to be seasoned with practical considerations in dealing with the registration statement each corporation must provide the commission. The law does not allow the commission to reveal trade secrets or processes, for instance, and there are other safeguards against too strict an application of the theory that the investor is entitled to all the information he can get on the inner workings of the concern whose securities he chooses to purchase.

The problem of publicity which the commission will soon tackle has been one of the chief concerns of the New York Stock Exchange in recent years and in enforcing its decisions in several instances it has been necessary to threaten to strike from the list the stock of corporations whose executives have been hesitant in furnishing information called for.

The French franc also was easier, because of exchange control operations, and closed at 76.43 to the pound, as against yesterday's close of 76.25.

The price of bar gold went down 1 penny, to 138 shillings, 1½ pence ($34.78) a fine ounce and an amount valued at £200,000 ($1,007,250) was purchased.

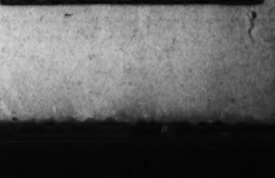
Wool Market.

Boston, June 27 (A.P.).—(U. S. Dept. Agriculture).—Despite the very quiet trade in the Boston wool market, a more hopeful undertone was noticed in comments of members of the trade. Reports indicated that goods were receiving a slightly better call. Some Boston dealers were reported to have purchased 12-month wool in Texas at estimated prices in the range 68-70 cents, scoured basis, landed Boston, for average wool, and 70-73 cents for choice clips.



Wheat Market Is Unchanged; Corn Strong

High Temperatures Cause Drought Menace; Oats Prices Fall.

Chicago, June 27 (AP).—Backbone in the grain markets today came largely from notable strength which developed in corn.

Abnormally high temperatures, reported as reaching 109 degrees at some places in the corn belt, were looked upon as a dangerous menace at the present stage of corn growth.

In this connection, it was pointed out that a decided dearth of reserve moisture prevails over a large part of the belt, and that rains are urgently needed by corn throughout important areas.

Corn Price Rises.

On extreme upturns, corn for December delivery rose to 60¾ cents, but receded somewhat later, the market as a whole closing firm, ½ to ⅞ above yesterday's finish, with wheat unchanged to ⅜ higher, oats ⅛ off to ¼ up, and provisions showing 2 cents to 7 cents decline.

Persistent speculative buying of corn futures was in evidence the greater portion of the day, especially on the part of leading professional traders.

Special notice was taken of exceptionally dry and hot weather in the West and Southwest. An official summary showed the corn crop in Kansas to be much spotted in condition, the result of lack of rainfall coincident with severe heat.

Assertions that a crisis regarding the corn crop was among the nearby possibilities served to center trade interest largely on that grain. On the other hand, wheat prices were dominated to a great extent by pressure of newly harvested receipts Southwest.

Rain Aids Crop.

Primary arrivals of domestic wheat today totaled 1,881,000 bushels, almost double those of a week ago, and comparing with 1,183,000 bushels at this time last year. Contributing to relative weakness of wheat were Canadian reports of improved crop conditions and of as much as 3 inches of rain overnight in parts of the Canadian prairie provinces.

Rallies witnessed at times in wheat prices were attributed somewhat to Washington advices tending to confirm recent bullish European estimates of curtailed world production of wheat. Oats were steadied by corn strength.

Provisions reflected downturns of the hog market.

Wall Street Briefs

New York, June 27 (AP).—Revenue freight loadings of the country's railroads for the week ended June 23, are estimated to tatal about 621,000 cars compared with 617,649 in the preceding week and 604,688 cars handled in the same week a year ago. The official figure will be announced on Friday by the American Railway Association.

Dun & Bradstreet's weekly food index stood at $2.17 for the week ended June 26, a decline of 2 cents from the $2.19 reported the previous week. The current figure compares with $1.94 for the same week in 1933.

It is reported in quarters close to the Armour & Co. management that holders of approximately 50 per cent of the total shares of Armour & Co. of Illinois to date have deposited proxies in support of the recapitalization plan. Under the company's charter the plan requires approval by two-thirds of each class of stock.

Wood F. Axton, president of Axton-Fisher Tobacco Co., reports that the company's business for the first five months of 1934 was nearly 50 per cent above the corresponding period of 1933. He said indications were that the first half of the year will show largest sales figures since the company started business in 1898.

The Iron Age composite prices for pig iron, finished steel and steel scrap are unchanged this week.

Cuba Coffee Production Is Reported Declining

Cuban coffee growers are faced with declining production just at a time when prices have been rising, according to a report from Consul L. R. Blohm, Havana, made public by the Commerce Department.

Cuban coffee production in the last two calendar years reached an average of over 56 million pounds annually, the report shows, the great bulk of the output being grown in the Province of Oriente. In 1933 this region accounted for more than 52 million pounds valued at $6,117,000. Estimates for the current year's crop in Oriente are far below the totals for the past three years, according to Consul Blohm.

Steel Position Improves.

Efforts of the European steel cartel to induce the British steel industry to join forces with that organization are likely to meet with greater opposition as a result of improvement in the British position which has occurred during the past year, according to a report to the Commerce Department from Trade Commissioner James Somerville, jr.

West Virginia Reports Upturn In Business

Coal Industry Leads in Recovery; Auto Buying Increases.

Charleston, W. Va., June 27 (Special).—Reports from representative business and industrial leaders of West Virginia show a decided increase in business and economic conditions throughout the State for June and for the period since January 1, as compared with the corresponding records of last year.

The coal industry, long in an unsettled condition, has shown the greatest spurt. A typical report is that by John Laing, president of the Wyatt Coal Sales Co., who says its business is double that of the first five and a half months of 1933. Figures of the Charleston Clearing House Association show the volume of business transacted by the banks to be 31 per cent ahead of last year.

Large advances in several lines, particularly a heavy increase in the purchase of automobiles, are shown by returns of the 2 per cent consumers' sales tax. An increase of 50 to 60 per cent in retail furniture sales are reported by store managers. In general retail merchants report a rise in retail sales and wholesalers say there is a brisk movement of goods to retail stores. So far the usual summer slump has not made its appearance.

Realtors report greater activity in building and real estate as indicated by inquiries from prospective builders and adoption of building plans.

A sharp decline in the need for relief this summer as compared with the situation last June is also shown. William N. Beehler, State relief administrator, reports "a decided improvement" in conditions and adds that "the people do not seem to be nearly as 'hard up' as they were last summer."

Cotton Prices Decline Under Selling Drive

July Closes at 12.12 as General Market Falls 8 to 11 Points.

New York, June 27 (AP).—Cotton declined today following a publication of the weekly weather report. October contracts, after selling at 12.48 during early trading, dropped to 12.33, and closed at 12.35, with the general market finishing steady at net declines of 8 to 11 points.

Initial prices showed small declines, but early offerings, which included some further July liquidation and Southern selling, were quite readily absorbed by trade and commission house buying.

Prices rose after the call, with July recovering to yesterday's closing and other months going 2 to 4 points net higher, with December selling at 12.60.

Selling More Active.

This rise was met by realizing and the selling became more active after the publication of the official weather report.

Offerings were not particularly heavy, but renewed talk of inflationary possibilities and protective Government purchases for relief failed to stimulate aggressive buying. July worked off to 12.12 and December to 12.47 in the late trading, making net losses of 9 to 13 points on active positions. Closing quotations were at or within a point or two of the lowest.

The Weather Bureau said that rain was needed in the Western belt, but otherwise the week's weather had been mostly favorable.

Exports today, 17,475, making 7,288,887 so far this season. Port receipts, 6,445. United States port stocks, 2,605,004.

Farm Group Buys 374,378 Cattle in North

(Associated Press.)

The Farm Administration has purchased 374,378 cattle in emergency drought areas of Minnesota, Wisconsin and the Dakotas.

The program, started less than three weeks ago in an effort to aid farmers in the drought belt, will be broadened later to all other emergency areas.

Cattle bought through this week included Minnesota, 58,190 head; North Dakota, 239,370; South Dakota, 72,991; Wisconsin, 3,827.

Purchases made represented slightly more than 42 per cent of all the cattle on farms from which they were purchased.

Two trainloads of cattle have been sent from the Dakotas to feeding yards in western Minnesota to relieve reported congestion of stock yards in the Dakotas.

The Federal Surplus Relief Corporation said cattle are being shipped from the drought areas to Southwestern packing houses.

Income Increased By Washington Gas

The monthly report of the Washington Gas Light Co. filed with the Public Utilities Commission yesterday shows net operating revenues for May of $167,110, compared with $163,716 for the same month in 1933, showing an increase of $3,394.

Operating revenues for May, $513,016, compare with $486,088 for May a year ago, an increase of $26,928. Operating expenses, including taxes and uncollectible bills increased $23,534, this year's figure being $345,906, as against $322,372 in May, 1933.

Net income of the company for May was $125,515, compared with $99,896 in the same month of 1933. This is an increase of $25,619, derived principally from nonoperating revenue.

Nonoperating revenue increased $22,836, producing a gross corporate income in May of $195,390, as against $169,160 in the same month of 1933. Interest deductions, increasing from $69,264 in May, 1933, to $69,875 in May this year, resulted in the net income shown above.

Exporters Renew Interest.

Increased American interest in the Chinese ginseng market was evident during the past year, according to a report from Vice Consul H. V. Cooke, jr., Shanghai, made public by the Commerce Department. This development, it was pointed out, was chiefly due to the reversed foreign exchange situation and the recent marked decreases in duties levied on imports of the root into China.

Steel Operation Rate Declines 20 Per Cent

Curtailment Explained by Let-Down in Rush to Make Deliveries.

New York, June 27 (AP).—A 20 per cent decline in the steel production rate, to 48 per cent of capacity, from 60 per cent last week was in line with trade expectations, said Iron Age today in its weekly review.

The drastic curtailment in operations is explained by the fact that raw steel production has recently been maintained at an artificially high rate to supply the needs of finishing mills which must complete shipments against second quarter contracts this week in order to comply with code requirements, the review asserted.

"That curtailment will continue next week is a foregone conclusion," said the publication. "A check will be offered by the necessity for building up raw steel inventories, which have been depleted by heavy June shipments, but steel companies will then regulate production to the rate of consumptive demand. The extent of such demand is the principal question confronting the industry today.

"Building operations financed by Government funds are likely to be affected least by summer activity. Such projects are not influenced by code restrictions and shipments of structural steel reinforcing bars, sheet steel pili, and other building products will go on as usual during the next two months to jobs which are already under way.

"Contract tonnage to be shipped to the railroads during July and August may not support steel production as much as was at first indicated.

"The trend of steel consumption by the automotive industry is still difficult to discern, but seems more encouraging."

Culbertson on Bridge

A Successful Operation.

I am telling today the story of a bridge operation which was entirely successful, but after which, as in the case of many other such operations, the patient died. The story is that of a vulnerable Grand Slam contract, spiced with 150 honors, and quite correctly bid, which failed of achievement because of an unfortunate block in the diamond suit, which compelled the Declarer to surrender the thirteenth trick to his adversaries. The player, however, did have the somewhat hollow satisfaction of having his partner agree with him that the bidding was correct, even though the Grand Slam was not made.

The hand was:
West, Dealer.
North and South vulnerable.

North: ♠ K Q 9 7 3 / ♡ A K J 8 5 / ◇ A K / ♣ 3

West: ♠ A J 10 8 / ♡ Q 10 7 6 / ◇ Q J 10 9 / ♣ A

East: ♠ 5 4 2 / ♡ 9 4 3 2 / ◇ 4 3 2 / ♣ K 4 2

South: ♠ 6 / ♡ — / ◇ 8 7 6 5 / ♣ Q J 10 9 8 7 6 5

The bidding: (Figures after bids refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs):

West	North	East	South
1♠(1)	2♠(2)	Pass	3◇
3♡	4♡(3)	Pass	5◇
5♠	6♣(4)	Pass	7♣(5)
Pass	Pass	Pass

1—With a 6-5 distribution in the major suits, West can not be criticized for opening against vulnerable opponents. Very little is needed in his partner's hand to assure him of a score, and only a few honors, if rightly placed, to give him a game.

2—An Overcall in the opponents' bid suit, backed up by five honor tricks and a solid suit to bid.

3—This is just what North wanted, so he now makes the Slam try of overcalling the second adversely bid suit.

4—North shows his preferred trump suit for the first time at the range of a Slam.

5—In view of North's tremendous bidding, South certainly must raise to a Grand Slam and, with four cards of his partner's suit, the choice appears reasonably obvious.

In the play, the spade 4 was led, and a study of all the hands will reveal that Dummy's diamonds were blocked and that it was absolutely impossible for the Declarer to discard his lone loser, the heart 9, on Dummy's fifth diamond. West, of course, had to make the guess whether to save a spade or a heart for the thirteenth trick, but, greatly to the chagrin of North, he guessed right.

Tomorrow's Hand.

North, Dealer.
North and South vulnerable.

North: ♠ A K / ♡ A 9 / ◇ Q 10 8 7 / ♣ A K Q J 10

West: ♠ Q J 10 9 8 6 / ♡ K Q J 10 2 / ◇ 5 / ♣ 7

East: ♠ 4 3 2 / ♡ 8 7 6 3 / ◇ J 9 2 / ♣ 6 5 3

South: ♠ 7 5 / ♡ 5 4 / ◇ A K 6 4 3 / ♣ 9 8 4 2

The hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

Missionary Life Is Dramatized

Living Conditions Depicted at Episcopal Meeting.

Chambersburg, Pa., June 27 (Spl.)—Delegates to the Blue Mountain Conference of the Episcopal Church, in session here, were afforded glimpses into living conditions in mission fields of the church through the medium of three dramatizations of missionary life.

Rev. J. A. Welbourn, Leesburg Va., for 28 years a missionary to Japan, directed the presentation of the Japanese scene. He was assisted by Miss Etta Ambler, Richmond, Va., daughter of a Japanese missionary, and Stephen Miagi, native Japanese student of the Philadelphia Divinity School.

Family life in the West Virginia mountains and mission problems in the Italian quarter of Philadelphia were subjects of other dramatic presentations.

Tonight, the Rev. Dr. Howard Weir, Philadelphia, advised the conference on the church's work.

BLACKIE BEAR

By D. SAM COX

They Are Certainly Going to Catch Blackie.

When Blackie and the Boys came back down from the mountains and got all those things from Uncle Joe's house that night when Howler was spending the night with Rover Dog over at Mr. Man's house, Uncle Joe was sure that he really wouldn't stand it any longer. And Mr. Man was right ready to help him hunt for Blackie, for he was getting mighty tired of having to ride around on Mr. Moo Cow.

Besides, he was beginning to think that Blackie might have had something to do with the stealing of Hee-Haw, even if he couldn't drive him.

So Mr. Man and Uncle Joe got some of their neighbors from away over near town to come out and help them hunt for Blackie. They got all the dogs they could find, and they hunted all over the country for miles and miles around, day and night, but they found no Blackie. Every day somebody would tell the others about some strange tracks that their neighbors had told them about seeing away over somewhere else, and they would go to hunt for them, but they never got on the trail of Blackie.

You know Jay Bird was visiting Who-Who Owl while this hunt was going on, and they would take turns at following the hunting party around. Who-Who Owl could see better at night, and so when the hunters were out at night he would follow them around and laugh himself tired to see them hunting a bear that was miles and miles away from them and having a good time eating the good things that they had worked to make for him; and in the daytime Jay Bird would follow them.

Both Jay Bird and Who-Who got lots of fun out of these trips, and then they would go back to Who-Who's house, and talk and laugh about the way Mr. Man and Uncle Joe and their friends were wearing themselves out hunting for Blackie Bear while he was eating and sleeping all he wanted to in his own home up at Lake Bettie. But the hunters didn't lose heart. They were sure of getting Blackie, for every day they heard of more tracks that looked like bear tracks. And one night Jay Bird followed Mr. Man home just to see what he would tell his wife about the day's hunt.

"Well," said Mr. Man, "we can't eat any bear meat tonight, but I heard all about the place where Blackie slept last night, and we are going right over there tomorrow and get him. We are right on his trail, and he will never get away from us." And he sat down to eat another supper without any bear meat.

Jay Bird went back to Who-

Who's house, and told him how soon Blackie was going to get killed, but Who-Who didn't cry a bit about it. In fact, he laughed as much as Jay Bird did, for it was funny to see how Mr. Man and his friends were fooled. Jay Bird wanted to go back and tell Blackie how they were finding all sorts of tracks except Blackie's, but Who-Who begged him to stay another day or two and see some more of the fun.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

For further proof address the author, inclosing a stamped envelope for reply. Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

Strange as it seems, French wines are made from French grapes, but a large part of those French grapes are grown on vines which have American roots. The vines above the ground are French, but under the ground they are American.

When insect pests which attacked grapevine roots threatened to destroy all of France's famous vineyards it was discovered that only the American wild grape was immune to this pest. The American grape, however, was not as well suited to wine production. The solution came with the grafting of French vines to American roots. Today in many French vineyards all of the vines have American roots.

In America today there are vineyards where all the vines have native American roots, but imported European vines.

John L. Clem was born in Newark, Ohio, in 1851. In 1861, at the age of 10, he attempted to join the Third Ohio Volunteers, but was rejected. The following year he joined the Twenty-second Michigan Volunteers as a drummer boy, and was with them at Shiloh, where his drum was destroyed by shellfire. At Chickamauga, he discarded his drum, carried a musket, and fought with distinction.

Here with three bullets holes in his hat he escaped capture by killing a Confederate colonel who attempted to catch him. Clem was then given a rank as sergeant. He continued his military career and at 20 was commissioned a second lieutenant. In 1875 he was graduated from the Artillery School, and in 1903 became a colonel and assistant quartermaster general.

Langer Looks To Ballot Box For Vindication

North Dakota's Primary Fight Brings Out Heavy Vote.

Bismarck, N. Dak., June 27 (AP). Gov. William Langer looked to the ballot box tonight for a verdict on his "vindication" campaign.

Loser in court about two weeks ago, when he was convicted of conspiracy to defraud the United States Government by solicitation of money from Federal relief workers, the chief executive hoped to win a three-cornered race for the Republican nomination for Governor.

Good weather and a growing tempo of voting presaged a high total. Interest stimulated by the recent sensational campaigns of Langer and T. H. H. Thoresen and J. P. Cain, his primary opponents, was at a height rarely attained in North Dakota.

In Valley City, particularly, a heavy early vote was cast. At one polling place the number of voters exceeded those of two years ago, when the highest total in the State's records, 256,000, was cast.

In last-minute pleas for support, uttered last night, Langer vigorously defended his record and his foes condemned it. They urged an administration to remove what they said was a "stain" on the State's good name.

Although the gubernatorial race held chief interest, attention also was given contests in which United States Senator Lynn J. Frazier and C. S. Buck sought the Republican nomination for Senator. A third candidate for the party's indorsement was Nelson A. Mason, former secretary of Frazier.

William Lemke and J. H. Sinclair sought favor over U. L. Burdick, president of the State Farmers Holiday Association and Langer faction indorsee, former Representatives Thomas Hall and Walter Bond, for the two Congressional places on the Republican ticket. Most of the regular Democratic candidates were unopposed.

Dive Into Bathing Pool Fatal to Coeburn Youth

Coeburn, Va., June 27 (Spl.).—Charles W. Davis, 23, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Davis, of Coeburn, died at 3:30 o'clock Monday afternoon of a broken neck he received 24 hours earlier while diving in a pool at Pound, Va.

Funeral services were held here this afternoon, interment following in the Ramsey Cemetery. He is survived by his widow, one child, his parents and several brothers and sisters.

Auto Theft Suspect Tries to Flirt and Finds Self in Jail

Hagerstown, Md., June 27 (Spl.).—Two quick-thinking girls were credited by police today with perhaps solving a wave of automobile thefts in recent weeks and the arrest of Charles Davis, 16, charged with unauthorized use of an automobile.

Davis made the mistake of trying to "pick up" the wrong girls, the escort of one of whom, Edward Waters, was the owner of the car.

Waters' car was stolen from the municipal stadium last night.

The girls recognized the car Davis was driving and engaged Davis in conversation until Waters, who likewise recognized his car, contacted a policeman.

A dozen or more cars have been stolen, presumably by joy riders, in recent weeks. Most of the machines have been abandoned and recovered.

Corbell.

FERA Projects Dropped In Lovettsville Area

Leesburg, Va., June 27 (Spl.).—Realizing that a large number of laborers will be needed for harvesting wheat, which is in full swing in Loudoun County this week, the FERA projects have been discontinued in Lovettsville district for a time that those on the relief work may aid the farmers.

According to Mrs. Blanche M. Melvin, county welfare worker, this district, which is largely rural, has the largest number of unemployed.

The wheat crop in Loudoun is very heavy and will furnish employment for a large group of workers.

Few Candidates File at Brunswick

Brunswick, Md., June 27 (Spl.).—With the municipal election of Brunswick scheduled for August 6, only two persons have announced their intention to seek the mayoralty post and a similar number for seats in the council.

Mayor Harry R. Mace, who is completing his first term of two years, has stated that he will be a candidate for reelection. He will be opposed by Ernest L. Main, who was chosen last year as a member of the council for two years. Mr. Main sought the office two years ago in a three-cornered race, but was defeated by Mayor Mace by a majority of 620 votes.

J. Luther Malone and Chester R. Phillips are the only two avowed candidates seeking election as members of the council. Both are members of the present board.
